LEGION TO AID POLICE ON MARCH; INVADERS DEFENDED BY WOMEN

Virginia Posts Act After Bar Here Is Dropped.

GARNER BANS PARADE PLAN

Vital Points in City to Be Guarded; Riot Insurance Taken.

As the 1932 hunger army made its reportedly bellicose way nearer to Washington last night, four outstanding developments auguring slight help and considerable discouragement to the marchers occurred in the path and at the goal of the movement.

First—American Legion posts individually in many sections of Maryland and Virginia, through which flanking States the hunger hordes will pass to the portals of the Capital, were moving to support police of their own jurisdictions in preserving the peace.

Second—Police here may be stationed at power plants, bridges, water plants, dairies and other points of strategic importance to the city's business and everyday life, it was indicated by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, last night, after he was advised of reliable information obtained by The Post that many firms of high standing in the city have obtained heavy riot insurance.

Third—Commissioners of the District yesterday completely rescinded as far as the hunger army is concerned, their order of July 30 prohibiting the entrance of organized groups who could not establish a lawful purpose for their visit here.

Fourth—Speaker Garner denied hunger marchers their request for permission to parade on the Capitol Grounds. Vice President Curtis refused to see the agents of the hunger army.

Virginia Legion Move.

The Vice President would not see the agents of the hunger marchers, William Reynolds and Herbert Benjamin, chairman and national secretary respectively of the Unemployed Councils of America.

The legion movement was an outgrowth of a meeting of State legionnaire officials in Richmond last Saturday and which gathering was told by National Commander Louis A. Johnson that the hunger march "may constitute a national emergency."

Letters have been sent to all posts through Virginia urging individual action by the units in offering their services to local authorities.

State Vice Commander Robert Insko, who has supervision over the Eighth

Woman Is Victim Of Holdup at Home

Mrs. Haywood Newbold Is Robbed of $10; Young Gunman Escapes.

Mrs. Haywood Newbold, of 2339 Massachusetts avenue northwest, reported she was robbed of $10 by a well dressed young man who knocked at the servant's entrance of her apartment late yesterday.

When she answered the door, she said, the man, who had a gun in his hand, told her to hand over her money. She gave him $10 which was in her pocket and he fled down the fire escape.

The robber was described as about 18 years old, dressed in dark clothes, about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighing about 135 pounds. The Newbolds live in a first-floor apartment. Mr. Newbold, a nephew of John and Fleming Newbold, is an official with the Merchants Transfer & Storage Co.

Beard Is Indicted Again in Tax Case

New Bill Charges Evasion of Levies Amounting to $55,000.

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Samuel B. Beard, said to be a bookmaker in Washington, was indicted by the United States grand jury today on a charge of evading his income tax payments for 1924 to 1931 except in 1929.

Beard was indicted several months ago, but only for the years 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1930. The new indictment, which supersedes the first, alleges he evaded taxes amounting to some $55,000 for the whole period.

Beard is at liberty on $10,000 bail pending trial.

D.C. Warned

Society Avers Marchers Must Be Treated Well Here.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The national committee for the defense of political prisoners announced tonight that letters had been sent to President Hoover and the District of Columbia Commissioners predicting a country-wide "wave of protest" if marchers are barred from Washington or mistreated in any way.

The committee listed among those sponsoring the letters Sidney Howard, Sherwood Anderson, Theodore Dreiser, Malcolm Cowley, Waldo Frank, Robert Morse Lovett, Lincoln Steffens, Mary Heaton Vorse and Edmund Wilson.

Referring to reports that marchers would be barred from Washington unless they can produce evidence of their ability to feed and shelter themselves while in the city, the committee members wrote in part:

"As we see it, the very despair and hunger of these citizens is reason for the Government to assist them in the exercise of their rights. * * * If the hunger marchers find it difficult

FORCE THREAT WINS CHEERS OF A. F. OF L.

Green Promises Strikes If 30-Hour Week Can't Be Won Otherwise.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Vociferous, almost boisterous, approval again was given today by organized labor to its president's proposal to use "economic force"—strikes and boycotts—should all other methods fail to win unemployment insurance and the 30-hour week.

Answering what he said was criticism of labor's "militant stand," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared: "We will draw up the line of battle and carry the struggle to the doors of industry until the jobless are given jobs."

There was no formal action. Instead delegates to the federation's convention leaped in cheers to their feet, pounding the floor, tables and each other as they yelled their approval.

"The fighting spirit still is in us," Green thundered as the cheers echoed back upon him. "We have notified the world we are going to fight with our economic force.

"If you are going to replace men and women with machinery, you, industrial management, must provide some way for them to make a living. You, industrial management, are re-

Czechoslavakia Plans Second Debt Delay Note

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The foreign ministry today was preparing a second note to Washington in connection with Czechoslovakia's request for a postponement of the December debt instalment.

The note will contain a comprehensive exposition of the economic and financial situation of the nation.

Social Leaders to Call on Hoover Today.

WILL DEMAND AID FOR ARMY

Violence Is Protested In Message to President.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—To bespeak shelter for the "marchers" converging upon the Capital, a group of women of social register and literary prominence headed for Washington tonight to seek a conference tomorrow with President Hoover.

In a telegram to the President, the women requested an interview and said:

"Committee represents groups throughout the country voicing protest to the antagonistic reception threatening representative unemployed workers now en route Washington. Committee wishes to remind President that these men and women are exercising their constitutional rights. This committee wishes to ask that marchers be given shelter and food and that no violence be used against them."

Women Participating.

The message was signed by Mrs. William B. Osgood Field, jr., member of a socially prominent New York family.

Participating with Mrs. Field were: Mrs. Corliss Lamont, daughter-in-law of Thomas W. Lamont, member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Mrs. Lincoln Steffens, wife of the noted journalist.

Mrs. Polly Chase Boyden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, of Lake Forest and Chicago.

Call at White House Today.

Mrs. Lamont, after the conference late today in Mrs. Field's penthouse overlooking Central Park, said she would not be able to make the trip to Washington.

The others will call tomorrow morning at the White House.

As spokesman for the group, Mrs. Field said:

"We wish to urge upon the President the necessity of recognizing the constitutional right of the people to petition the Government, as expressed in Article I of the Constitution. If the demands of the hunger marchers are not given due consideration by the administration, Democracy becomes a farce."

Man Dives From Taxi Through Store Window

A flying dive from the running board of a taxicab to the inside of a department store show window—via the center of a huge pane of plate glass—was accredited last night to James Donohue, 32, of 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, by police of the First Precinct.

Donohue, rescued from the middle of a heap of broken glass, was taken to Emergency Hospital. He suffered a severely lacerated hand and possible fractured finger.

U. S. AGENCIES FOR DROPPING OF FURLOUGHS

WORKERS WILL GET HEARING TOMORROW

Civil Service Heads Bodies in Move for Economy Modification.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Relegation of the Government's legislative furlough to the junk heap, and widespread modification of other restrictive provisions of the economy act, is almost universally asked in confidential recommendations of thirteen independent Federal agencies made public yesterday by the Senate economy committee.

At the same time the committee announced that Government employes will have their day in court. Hearings on economy act modification, open to representatives of accredited Federal employes' organizations, were set for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Organized Federal workers were not given a hearing in last year's economy inquiry.

Col. J. Clawson Roop, director of the budget, yesterday presented the case for the various departments to the Senate economy committee. Recommendations of department heads had been turned over to him for analysis. They were not included in the confidential committee prints made public yesterday. He will appear before the committee again this afternoon with Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, Postmaster General Brown and Veterans Administrator Frank T. Hines.

Headed by Civil Service.

Heading the list of independent Federal agencies seeking amelioration of drastic economy act provisions, the Civil Service Commission asked discontinuance of legislative furloughs and "a return to the deliberately studied pay schedules in the last amendment to the classification act, without the use of automatic furloughs."

Recommendations of the United States Bureau of Efficiency were somewhat out of harmony with the general clamor for extensive alteration of economy act provisions. They warned against economy act amendment.

"I believe that Congress should follow a very definite policy that no amendment to the act shall be made unless it is necessary to remove a very great hardship or to correct a substantial discrimination," wrote Director Herbert D. Brown.

"If numerous amendments are made, uncertainty as to the meaning and application of the law as amended will exist until decisions can be made by the Comptroller General. Such general uncertainty is a decided hardship to the efficient discharge of the administrative work of the Government and should be avoided as far as possible.

Pointing out alleged injustice of dual payless furloughs under the

EXTRA SESSION ON ROOSEVELT'S FARM AID SEEN

GLASS IS BELIEVED PICK FOR TREASURY

Tobacco Production Phase of Relief Program Is Topic at Parley.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—From the round of conferences being held on the slopes of Pine Mountain, there emerged today the definite impression that Franklin D. Roosevelt would call a special session of Congress if the next three months do not bring the enactment of farm relief legislation.

The President-elect, himself, at a late afternoon press conference declined to "cross that bridge until I come to it," but from persons close to Mr. Roosevelt there came word that he was extremely anxious to have a farm relief measure enacted that would set up machinery for dealing with the 1933 crop.

A little earlier in the day, Mr. Roosevelt had talked with a group of Georgians, dealt with a delegation from the Crusaders for Economic Liberty in such a way as to stave off a threatened demonstration at Warm Springs and held a long talk about farm relief with George W. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Co.

Glass for Treasury Looms.

During the day the impression grew among persons close to the Roosevelt circle of advisors that Senator Glass of Virginia was to be offered the post of Secretary of Treasury. The President-elect referred questioners to his recent statement asserting that Cabinet appointments would not be considered until after January 1.

A talk that Mr. Roosevelt was to have had with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson over plans for his inauguration was put over until tomorrow, although Grayson visited the President-elect late this afternoon with Beckenridge Long, a former Assistant Secretary of State. Grayson is chairman of the inauguration committee.

In his talks with Senators George and Cohen and Gov. Russell, who soon will replace Cohen in the Senate, Mr. Roosevelt went over the general legislation program of the Democrats. Several of the senators who have conferred with the President-elect have expressed the view that Congress at the short session can not complete the task that is being cut out for it.

Discuss Tobacco Program.

The discussion with Hill covered particularly the tobacco production phase of farm relief. They also talked over the dual taxation of cigarettes, by States and by the Federal Government.

In the conversations over the methods that might be employed for raising the price of tobacco to the

Love Note Is Clew In Dallas Murder

Nude Woman Found Dead Strangled With Her Own Stocking.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—A brief note scrawled on a small piece of paper—"So you don't love me"—was studied by police in an effort to solve the slaying of Mrs. H. K. Buchanan, 28, whose nude body was found in her apartment today.

A silk stocking wrapped around the neck and bruises on the knees indicated she had been strangled to death.

The note was regarded by detectives as a major clew. They said a half-filled whisky bottle and a pair of dice also were found in the apartment of Mrs. Buchanan, a film exchange booking clerk, whose estranged husband is employed in Oklahoma City.

Buchanan left the Oklahoma capital by airplane today upon being informed of her death. Justice of the Peace E. John Baldwin, called to conduct a coroner's inquest, returned a verdict of murder.

Four Masked Men Get $3,000 in Bank Holdup

Southampton, Pa., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Four men, masked and carrying shotguns and pistols, today held up the Southampton State Bank, forced several persons to stretch themselves on the floor, and escaped in an automobile with about $3,000.

Less than a dozen persons knew what had happened as the men fled from the small Bucks County town.

BRITISH PLEA TO U. S. URGES DEBT DELAY TO AID WORLD RECOVERY

Highlights of British Note To America on War Debts

Significant passages from the British note:

"International monetary mechanism, without which the modern world can not effectively conduct its daily life, is being broken into pieces with all the manifold forms of privation and distress which this involves."

"Reparations and war loans represent expenditure on destruction."

"In the long run international debts can only be paid in the form of goods or services."

"Fall in prices has seriously increased the burden of commercial debts; but it has rendered intolerable the pecuniary burden of unproductive war debts."

"The principle of capacity to pay can only be regarded as of secondary importance compared with an even wider principle, viz: that of the capacity of the world to endure the economic and financial consequences which those transfers would involve."

The cost of the depression was fixed in the British note at $5,000,000 for every hour. This represents the decrease in the value of international trade over the last six months.

"The British share of the total indebtedness to the United States is only 40 per cent; of the total debt payments made to the United States 80 per cent has come from Great Britain."

British import restrictions (necessary for resumption of debt payments) would inevitably reduce the market for American farm products in the United Kingdom.

BOTH PARTIES WORK TO BALANCE BUDGET

Farm Relief Problems Get Attention With Extra Session Probable.

(Associated Press.)

Republican and Democratic legislative programs focusing on the fiscal and farm relief problems took shape yesterday in conferences at the White House and on Capitol Hill, with indications that an extra session of the new Congress next spring will be necessary.

Divergent views developed between the administration and the Democrats on methods of wiping out the mounting Treasury deficit and troubles also were in store on the farm measures.

President Hoover called in advisers in a final drive to make economies do much of the work of matching expenditures and income. He was still considering a recommendation for new tax legislation, probably the sales levy, to complete the job.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, returned from a conference with President-elect Roosevelt and suggested that the budget be balanced by economies, a tax on legalized beer and possibly by resorting to a bond issue to pay the cost of self-liquidating Government construction projects.

Robinson expressed the hope that sufficient work could be accomplished at the three months' session of Congress beginning Monday to avoid an extra session in the spring. However, Chairman Steagall, of the House banking committee, another recent visitor with Gov. Roosevelt, doubted

PALMER UPHOLDS GARNER ON REPEAL

Defends Legality of Calling State Conventions to Act Immediately.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Sustaining Speaker John N. Garner in his program for consideration of prohibition repeal next Monday, former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer yesterday advocated prompt disposition of the whole problem through State ratification conventions called by Congress itself, instead of the several State Legislatures.

In support of this yet untried constitutional formula for changing the fundametnal law of the land, Mr. Palmer made public an extended legal brief covering virtually every argument which has been advanced recently against the State convention method of ratification.

Whereas ratification of the repeal resolution by the State Legislatures might be dragged out almost indefinitely, he argued, conventions could be decreed uniformly in all of the States on a given date—by a single act of Congress—and the entire process of ratification thus executed in three or four months.

Under this method, he added, new Federal revenues from the reestablished legal liquor trade might become available to the Treasury during the next fiscal year, which begins next July 1, 1933. He estimates these revenues eventually would approach $2,000,000,000 a year.

"The Congress might, if it would, pass a repeal resolution immediately on convening on the first Monday in December next," Mr. Palmer's brief

Payment Dec. 15 Seen Hurting London.

NOTE CITES PRICE FALL

No Mention Made of Hoover's Plan for Arms Cut Trade.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

Against the dark background of international disintegration, Great Britain yesterday set forth the reasons which compel her to reiterate her request for postponement of the war debt payments due December 15 and a general reconsideration of the entire debt problem.

The second British note conveyed the very definite implication that payment of the $95,550,000 due next fortnight would entail grave financial risks to the "responsibilities of London as a financial center."

It revealed that the gold reserves of the Bank of England were sufficient only for current financial transactions and the difficulties of exchange and the inadequacy of credits were also stressed. A discreet silence was maintained with regard to the proposal of the President—to trade war debts for armament reductions.

Hoover Receives Note.

This note was delivered to the British Embassy Wednesday night and was delivered to Secretary Stimson at his home in Woodley before 8 a. m. yesterday. Secretary Stimson went at once to the White House, where he revealed the text of the note to President Hoover and Secretary of the Treasury Mills.

Later in the day Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay called at the Department of State and remained with Secretary Stimson for almost an hour. He declined to reveal the object of his visit. It was indicated, however, that he desired to inform his government of the immediate reaction of the President and the two Cabinet officers most concerned to the second British demarche.

The second British note is generally regarded as an eloquent, far-reaching presentation of the debt problem from the British point of view. In length it is much more extensive than the first appeal which was delivered here last November 10.

Is in Three Sections.

The note itself is divided in three sections, which are closely connected. The first section is a general development of the whole debt problem from its inception. The second is more specifically confined to the fiscal details of the debt problem in relation to British and American taxes, and apparently is aimed at persuading American public opinion of the necessity of reconsidering the entire debt problem not on the old basis of "capacity to pay," but on the modern concept of the "capacity of the world to endure the economic and financial consequences of the debts."

The third section is more directly concerned with the problem of postponement than the more remote one of reconsideration.

Throughout the entire note there is an absence of technical terminol-

Marilyn Miller Marooned On Ship Without Baggage

Actress and Six of Her Friends Unintentionally Bound for Europe After Failure to Heed Bremen's "All Ashore" Call.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Marilyn Miller and six friends were on an unintentional boat ride today, bound for Europe on the Bremen with no baggage and, apparently, no passports.

The seven went down to the Brooklyn pier Tuesday night to say farewell to Mrs. Alan Dwan, wife of the motion picture producer, failed to heed the "All Ashore!" call and were carried out to sea.

"On board the Bremen without clothing" read the radiogram sent by the stage and screen actress to Mrs. Carrie Carter, mother of Miss Miller's first hubsand, Frank Carter.

The fact that Don Alvarado, motion picture actor, was one of the "stowaways" led to reports that he and Miss Miller were married. There have been frequent rumors that the two were engaged. A few weeks ago the actress said they were "just good friends," and that reports of an engagement were started "because we are seen together so much."

"She may be engaged to Don," Mrs. Carter said, "but I do not think they are married. It's possible that they have been or are going to be married on board the ship."

In messages to the North German Lloyd Line, Capt. Leopold Ziegenbein, of the Bremen, listed his other unintentional passengers as "Mrs. Hughes Murray, Miss Anita and Miss Betty Murray, and Mr. and Mrs. Tierney."

The messages did not say but it was assumed that none of the seven had passports and would therefore be unable to land at European ports. The Bremen stops at Cherbourg, Southampton and Bremen on its eastward trip.

Mrs. Carter said arrangements had been made by radio to supply those on board with money.

Bomb Explodes in Hands Of Chicago Banker's Wife

Infernal Device Is Sent Through Mails to Fashionable Home and Is Followed by Note Demanding $4,000 and Threat of Further Violence.

Chicago, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—An attempt to kill Solomon A. Smith, bank president and a director of two huge utilities companies, was disclosed today with the revelation that a bomb sent through the mails had exploded in his wife's hands.

Mrs. Smith found the bomb, wrapped in brown paper and packed with plaster of paris, in the family mail box about two weeks ago, authorities said. It exploded as she opened it on a living room table. She escaped injury.

Chicago's "Secret Six," private investigators, and authorities from suburban Lake Forest, summer home of the Smiths, were called into the inquiry. The package was delivered to the Smith home on fashionable Lake Shore drive, in Chicago.

Nine days later, Smith received a letter demanding that he pay $4,000 and warning: "Your life will be the penalty for failure to comply with our demands."

The letter was mailed in suburban La Grange and was written in ink in handwriting described by experts as that of a woman. The text said in part:

"Mr. Smith: Just a line to let you know we haven't forgotten. How did you like our little present? There are more where that came from. We want $4,000 from you and intend to get it. You can see that we have the means of enforcing our demands. And if you don't want any bloodshed you will follow further instructions closely."

Then followed instructions for Smith to insert a "personal" advertisement in a morning newspaper if he were willing to accede to the demands. Smith said he inserted the advertisement several times as instructed, but never received a reply.

BITTING IS CHOSEN BALLSTON CYCLOPS

Klansmen Plan Parade as Warning to Hunger Marching "Reds."

More than 300 klansmen crowded into the Ballston Hall last night, elected Howard E. Bitting exalted cyclops of the Ballston Klan No. 6.

Plans were announced at the meeting for a parade tonight, which is announced will be the largest ever staged in Arlington County. The parade, headed by the Ballston Band, with all marchers in regalia, will leave the Ballston Field on a county-wide march. The officials' car bearing the fiery cross will immediately follow the band.

In concluding the parade, the klansmen will return to the field, where under a fiery cross, 80 feet high, J. L. Baskin, grand dragon of Virginia klansmen, will deliver an address.

In explaining the demonstration, Exalted Cyclops Bitting said:

"The klan has come to the conclusion that America must be preserved for Americans."

Tonight's parade is for the purpose of demonstrating the strength of the klan to the hunger marchers, whom the klan described as "Reds," now on their way to Washington.

Cosmopolitan Club Nominees Chosen

Robert W. MacChesney Is Named by Group for Presidency.

Robert W. MacChesney yesterday was nominated for the presidency of the Cosmopolitan Club for the year 1933. The nominations were held at the regular weekly meeting at the Carlton Hotel. In addition to the presidency, W. H. McCarty was nominated for vice president; Thomas Groome, for treasurer, and Michael D. Schaefer, for secretary.

A. Hamilton Wilson and Granville Gude were nominated as members of the executive committee, replacing Emory Gulliher and Dr. G. Albert Smith, and Dr. Frank Murray was was nominated to fill the unexpired term of Mr. McCarty.

Gordon Bonnette was nominated for delegate to the international convention of Cosmopolitan Clubs with William L. King, retiring president, as alternate. James E. Colliflower was elected secretary of the Capital District Federation of Cosmopolitan Clubs, and L. E. Rubel was named delegate to the District convention, with Dr. J. Rozier Biggs and Lewis A. Payne as alternates. All the nominees were unopposed and will be elected at next Thursday's meeting.

Hitler Again Demands Berlin Chancellorship

Berlin, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—In another letter to President von Hindenburg today, Adolf Hitler, Nazi chieftain, renewed his demand that he be made chancellor. The request, however, failed to end a 15-day cabinet crisis, although Hitler gave the chancellorship as the price he would exact for his cooperation with the national concentration cabinet.

Meanwhile Franz von Papen, who resigned the chancellorship last week, and Gen. von Schleicher, regarded by the press as the sole candidate for the post, conferred today. It was understood that they told each other about the results of their political scouting expeditions during the last few days.

PALMER UPHOLDS GARNER ON REPEAL

concluded. "This resolution might provide for every detail of the election of delegates and the operation of conventions in the several States. Such action would be unprecedented, but it would be plainly constitutional. It would be strictly in accord with the purpose of the Constitution for meeting a real emergency by prompt amendment to the Constitution. The prohibition issue has been debated by the people for many years. They are ready to pronounce a verdict. The issue could be finally disposed of within four months after Congress meets. If the people really want repeal—which the action of both parties seems to indicate—they may and should have it at once."

Although Mr. Palmer has been a close political friend of President-elect Roosevelt since they were associates in the Wilson administration more than ten years ago, the former Attorney General explained that his arguments for convention ratification were entirely his own.

Helped Frame Platform.

"In presenting this brief," he said in a covering statement, "I represent no interest, as an attorney or otherwise. I speak only for myself, as a citizen desiring to be helpful in carrying out the people's will."

Mr. Palmer was a member of the drafting committee of five which framed the final text of the Democratic national platform at Chicago last summer.

Meanwhile the prohibition maelstrom on Capitol Hill churned up new complexities and confusions yesterday in the discussions of House and Senate leaders of both parties.

The movement looking to immediate consideration of a repeal resolution in the House appeared to gain headway as Republican leaders began to talk of possible amendments to the Garner text, to provide the safeguards promised in the Republican national platform.

A private poll of the House judiciary committee, which must pass on the repeal resolution, showed a division yesterday of 13 to 9 in favor of some action looking toward repeal. There was sharp division among the repealers, however, on the method of ratification to be approved by Congress.

Plans Fight for Wine.

Representative Lea, of California, announced his determination to introduce next week a bill to legalize light wines and to press for action before the ways and means committee when revenue legislation is considered.

Senator Robinson, of Indiana, always classed as an uncompromising dry, vigorously reaffirmed his opposition to repeal, but said he thought a beer bill might be enacted at the short session.

Mr. Palmer characterized the projected beer bill in the short session as at best a mere "stop-gap," which, even should it meet with executive approval, would fall far short of the platform pledges of both parties in the last campaign.

ARMS TO GREET MARCHERS

Legion District of Virginia, told of the legion decision and reiterated National Commander Johnson's declaration, which follows:

"The hunger march may be a national emergency and action of local officers in checking it will check the recruiting of men to join the march which is believed to be of Communistic origin and the entire legion should assist in preserving the Nation's safety."

At a meeting of the Eighth District Council in Leesburg yesterday, four posts—Quantico, Manassas, Alexandria and Leesburg—were represented as being in accord with the national commander's suggestion.

Arlington Post Joins.

Early last night Commander Robert H. Forman, of Arlington County Post, No. 139, said that the post had offered the services of its roster to county authorities. This post's action was expected to for mthe first of a general move by the State legion.

Montgomery County Council, comprising a number of posts in nearby Maryland, will meet tonight in the National Guard Armory at Silver Spring, to consider the advisability of stepping to the side of civil authorities in the crisis threatened by advent of the hunger marchers.

Indications that the county council would act as suggested by the national commander, were given strong impetus with individual decision of Takoma Park Post to offer its support to Mayor Frederick L. Lewton.

Tear Gas Distributed.

Brig. Gen. Milton A. Reckford, commander of the Maryland National Guard and State commander of the American Legion, will address the council meeting in Montgomery County tonight as will other officials of the legion.

After scanning hunger march progress reports, newly received supplies of tear gas were given for the first time yesterday to all police precincts in Montgomery County. A long range tear gas rifle also was received at Rockville headquarters. The equipment was ordered purchased in prospect of the hunger march several weeks ago by County Commissioner John Diamond and Chief of Police Alvie Moxley.

Maj. Brown announced the Commissioners' decision on the group banning order after a lengthy conference at the District Building at which were present besides the Commissioners, William W. Bride, corporation counsel, and several of his assistants.

The police head said that he went to the District Building after Benjamin and Reynolds had informed him yesterday morning that tentative arrangements had been completed for housing the hunger army here and for feeding them.

The hunger marchers informed Maj. Brown he said, that they intend to arrive simultaneously from three directions Sunday afternoon.

Plans of Marchers.

A convention was scheduled immediately for the marchers to run through Monday. Tuesday the attempts to petition the President and Congress will be made, with evacuation of the city promised by Tuesday night or Wednesday morning at the latest.

Maj. Brown said Benjamin had informed him that a large vacant warehouse, formerly used for food storage purposes, had been rented by the hunger marchers. The police head would not disclose the location of the huge army's prospective barracks, but it was learned it is in the Northeast section of the city.

Benjamin also informed the police head that a large vacant lot would be obtained for parking the automobiles and trucks of the hunger army. This would enable the marchers to "get around" efforts of District officials to keep them on the move by strictly enforcing all parking regulations.

Parade Permit in Doubt.

Asked if the hunger army would be allowed to display banners while here, Maj. Brown said: "I do not think that would be objectionable." Capitol authorities have announced strict enforcement of the regulations against display of banners and placards there.

Maj. Brown, who has authority to issue permits for parades, said no decision had been made as to whether such allowance would be made. "Circumstances will, of course, govern the issuance of parade permits," he said.

Benjamin yesterday secured a blank form for application for parade permits, but the police head said the hunger army representative did not indicate what route would be applied for.

Reaction of the two hunger army officials to their official receptions around town yesterday was varied. Benjamin was still bitter about "police attacks," while Reynolds was inclined to feel that police were "cooperating."

Search for Aliens Planned.

The request of the hunger army to parade to the Capitol and petition Congress was listened to attentively by Speaker Garner, who then firmly, but courteously informed the two men that what they asked was denied.

A search for criminal aliens will be made in the hunger army when they arrive here, it was indicated yesterday. Commissioner General of Immigration Harry E. Hull announced that all cooperation would be advanced by his bureau to the Washington police.

A report was current last night and under investigation by police that a number of B. E. F. members had already arrived in Washington as part of the hunger march and had then been ordered out of town by B. E. F. officials. This report could not be confirmed late last night.

900 Arrive in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Led by a gray-uniformed band, about 900 "marchers" on their way to Washington, D. C., from New Jersey, New York and New England invaded the city today.

With the band blaring a martial air, the demonstrators in 21 trucks and about a dozen automobiles, arrived at Reyburn Plaza, opposite City Hall, and held a brief meeting.

Two of their representatives appeared in city council chambers, and, before crowded galleries, demanded that the city's legislative body add $2,000,000 to the State's appropriation for unemployment relief.

At the conclusion of a speech by Norris Wood in which he urged council to indorse the "march," President of Council Edwin R. Cox designated the sergeant at arms to escort Wood and Miss Violet Lynn, the other representative, from the chamber.

The marchers finally broke up, with groups heading for the mill districts in Kensington and Frankford, where they sought shelter for the night. They will continue their trip tomorrow to the Capital by way of Wilmington, Del.

Group Reaches Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—In trucks and battered cars, more than 700 marching demonstrators from the Midwest reached Pittsburgh tonight, to be fed and housed until morning, when their journey to Washington will be resumed.

Police details met the travelers at the city limits and escorted them to food and lodging stations. Groups held parades at some points; others dispersed to halls where meetings were conducted, and many gathered at public parks, where they sang and shouted. Police were on duty at all the meeting places to maintain order.

Members of the State highway patrol were stationed along roads where the demonstrators passed in western Pennsylvania.

Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Five hundred "marchers" en route to Washington to seek Federal aid, headed their trucks and automobiles toward Pittsburgh today after spending the night in quarters provided by Youngstown sympathizers. Another group of about 160 marchers moved eastward from near Steubenville.

Woman Fined in Richmond.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The Richmond Unemployed Council activities dragged another woman into police court today.

The victim was Mattie Bentley, Negro, who was arrested for begging on the streets. A. Tomkin, leader and organizer of the group, appeared with her and explained that the council was begging for funds for the benefit of the marchers who are due here Saturday en route to Washington for the opening of Congress.

Justice T. Gray Haddon told the woman he thought she was a victim of ignorance of the law against begging on the streets without a permit. He fined her $5, remitted the fine, and told her to use the 62 cents she had begged to buy food for the child she had in her arms.

Police Leaves Canceled.

After the hearing Tomkin, whose own hearing on a vagrancy charge is pending, said they had plenty of food for the marchers. He added "There will be no trouble or disorder unless it is provoked by the authorities."

Although city officials have revealed no special program for the arrival of the marchers, all State police leaves have been recalled.

Baltimore, Dec 1 (A.P.).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie said today that the Maryland State and city police and National Guard will be prepared to "handle any situation" which may arise when the 1,750 marchers expected in Baltimore Saturday arrive.

"These agencies will be prepared to play any part the situation may call for," the governor asserted. "Nothing is known yet about what the situation may develop into, but each of these agencies will be on the job."

Montgomery County's new tear gas equipment arrived yesterday in readiness for possible trouble with the hunger marchers. Chief of Police Alvie A. Moxley, left, and Sergt. Roy Bodmer, of Rockville police headquarters, are shown with the equipment. The chief is holding tear gas grenades, while Sergt. Bodmer is attired as a tear gas grenadier. The vest holds long range shells, such as he is loading into the gun, and also a row of grenades.

Many White House Jobs to Be Filled

Usher Hoover Among Few Who May Escape Roosevelt Mop.

(Associated Press.)

The line has not formed on either the right or left yet, but when President and Mrs. Hoover leave the White House March 4 there will be a score of vacancies to be filled. Secretaries, stenographers, naval and military aids, a White House physician, a few personal assistants and stenographers, perhaps a butler or two and some maids—Franklin D. Roosevelt, the new master of the Pennsylvania avenue mansion, will fill the jobs.

Four of them, three secretaries to President Hoover and a literary assistant, paid $40,000 a year in salaries before pay cuts. Three of Mrs. Hoover's secretaries will go out with her.

But while there may be many new faces, at least one old-timer will stay behind—Irwin H. Hoover, head usher for 43 years, known to thousands of White House visitors.

Tea House Terms Set for Tuesday

Two Convicted Men Held Under Special Guard at La Plata.

John Wallace and James Zalenski, Baltimoreans convicted of second degree murder in connection with the tea house killing in Bladensburg last fall, will be sentenced Tuesday, it was intimated yesterday in Charles County court in La Plata. They are liable to a penalty of from two to eighteen years.

Meanwhile, the defense has not decided whether or not it will take an appeal or ask a new trial, pending a conference of the five defense lawyers today.

Wallace and Zalenski, convicted of being members of the gang which held up the tea house and indulged in a gun battle which ended with Grover Amick, of Washington, dead on the floor, are still being kept under heavy guard at the La Plata Jail. Sheriff Robert V. Cooksey has ordered two extra guards on duty and every precaution is being taken.

Indian Bishop Leaves Seminary Here Today

The Right Rev. Timothy Crowley, Bishop of Dacca, Bengal, India, who for the past four months has been at the Holy Cross Foreign Mission Seminary, of Washington, will leave today for Rome, en route to his missionary diocese.

Bishop Crowley came here last August following the Eucharistic Congress in Dublin. A brief farewell ceremony will attend his departure.

Trade Board Urges Ball at Inaugural

Wire Is Sent to Grayson Outlining Plans for Ceremony.

An inaugural ceremony, including a semiofficial ball, was proposed yesterday by the Washington Board of Trade and its Greater National Capital committee in a telegram to Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Democratic inaugural committee, who is conferring with Gov. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., on inaugural plans. The trade board offered to take the lead in such a celebration in cooperation with other civic organizations. John F. Costello, District Democratic national committeeman, was reported to have approved the plan.

Proceeds from the ball, under the trade board's plan, would go to the Community Chest, and the incoming President would be invited to attend as guest of honor. The Board of Trade's proposal followed action by the board of governors of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association urging a lavish inaugural celebration. Curtis D. Hodges, director of the Greater National Capital committee, announced the railroads have agreed to cooperate in offering special rates. Assurance also has been given by hotels that there will be no increase in rates, Mr. Hodges said.

CANAL BACKERS SAY MIDWEST MAROONED

Other Witnesses Assert U. S. Gets Short End of Seaway Pact.

(Associated Press.)

The St. Lawrence waterway treaty was alternately described to a Senate committee yesterday as the means of saving a "marooned" Middle West from "dry rot" and a pact which should be rejected because it would not give the United States a square deal. The two views were expressed to the foreign relations subcommittee considering the treaty by witnesses from the Middle West, both of whom favor the St. Lawrence project.

One of them, however, Cleveland A. Newton, of St. Louis, spokesman for the Mississippi Valley Association, said the treaty's limitation of water diversion at Chicago would endanger the waterway from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

The other, Fred S. Keiser, traffic manager of the Duluth Board of Trade and traffic commissioner for the Duluth Chamber of Commerce, pictured the St. Lawrence project as a vital necessity for the States tributary to the lakes.

Earlier, two witnesses from New York concluded the presentation of the views of Northern cities in that State favoring the treaty.

Keiser testified the Middle West had been "marooned" economically by the Panama Canal and high freight rates.

Kerns Is Indicted As Vulgar Writer

B. E. F. Judge Advocate Is Held by Grand Jury in Obscenity Case.

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Wayland B. Kerns, judge advocate general of the Bonus Expeditionary Army in Washington last summer, was indicted today by the United States grand jury on a charge of sending an obscene letter through the mails.

Kerns was arrested in Richmond, Va., November 15 on a warrant following the complaint of Mrs. Maude Edgell, of Catonsville, Md., who had sheltered Kerns and several veterans and offered the B. E. F. a colony site at Woodburg, Md., following its expulsion from Washington.

The former judge advocate was alleged to have sent the letter to Mrs. Edgell from Richmond and she turned it over to Federal authorities. Kerns was released on $1,000 after a hearing in Richmond, when he was ordered removed to Baltimore.

to exist on their own resources while in Washington, it is in the public interest that they be given aid. Certainly their poverty does not justify the abrogation of their rights.

"If they are barred from the city, if their entrance is made to depend on illegal conditions, if they are mistreated in any way, we predict that there will arise throughout the country a spontaneous wave of protest. This protest will assume proportions far beyond those of the protest against the brutal mistreatment of the bonus marchers last summer.

"The situation is grave. At this moment of crisis officials are obligated to refrain from all acts of provocation and brutality which might precipitate serious disorder and violence. If the Washington authorities have learned something of the state of mind of large masses of our population since last summer, and if they are not callously indifferent to that state of mind, they will facilitate the entrance of the hunger marchers and their stay in the city. Any other attitude on their part will be intolerable."

DEFENDANTS SPLIT IN EAGLES' LOTTERY

Rift Widens as New York Trial Draws Rapidly Toward Close.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The rift between two sets of defendants in the Fraternal Order of Eagles' lottery case widened today as the trial neared a close with unexpected speed.

Clyde Taylor, of Kansas City, one of the defense counsel for Conrad H. Mann, and Frank E. Hering, officials of the fraternal order, testified on their behalf that Bernard C. McGuire, promoter for the Eagles of what the Government charged was a lottery, did not disclose to them, or to him as their attorney, the plan by which he expected to make legal distribution of the awards.

Asked by the court if he made any effort to learn how McGuire planned to distribute prizes in connection with an Eagles "charity frolic and dance" enterprise conducted in 1931, Taylor said that he did not.

Witness Rather Vague.

"I didn't suppose that a man of Mr. McGuire's standing would have anything to do with a lottery," he testified, "and I knew that my man wouldn't."

"How did you suppose that awards could be distributed legally?" Prosecutor Louis Mead Treadwell asked him on cross-examination.

"Well," said Taylor, "I supposed that the local Eagle aeries could have given prizes to the most popular couple at each dance, or something like that.

McGuire and Raymond Walsh, his assistant, are codefendants with Mann and Hering in the trial and they are represented by Max D. Steuer.

Government Rests.

The Government's case was rested abruptly this morning after defense counsel agreed to accept by stipulation most of the voluminous documentary evidence relating to the printing and shipping of tickets.

The defense, at the opening of the afternoon session, entered more than a dozen motions for dismissal of the indictments and for directed verdict. All of them were denied. Representatives of several Eagle aeries were placed on the stand then to testify that the profits which accrued to their lodges were used for charity.

Court adjourned at 4 p. m., an hour early, because the conclusion of the Federal case had found the defense unprepared with all its witnesses. They expected to finish their case tomorrow, but were doubtful that summations could be finished before the close of court hours.

Diplomats Leave For Arms Parley

MacDonald and Davis Off for Geneva With Hopeful Minds.

Paris, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain and Norman Davis, American disarmament representative, left here tonight for Geneva full of hope for the five-power arms parley, to be held there within the next few days. Premier Edouard Herriot likely will follow to Switzerland tomorrow. Mr. MacDonald arrived from London this afternoon, but did not confer with French officials.

Mr. Davis told the Associated Press that the five-power interview could do much to push forward armament reduction perhaps to a point sufficient to obviate another general arms conference for some time to come.

He envisaged creation of some sort of organism permanent in character to carry out work already accomplished and work which he hoped would be done by forthcoming five-power negotiations. The negotiations, he said, might pave the way for some sort of disarmament treaty.

'SHOCKING' STUDENT VICE RING REVEALED

Four Illegal Operations Are Reported to Grand Jury in Houston.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Declaring "shocking" conditions of vice among boys and girls of high school age had been uncovered in Houston, Frank Williford, assistant district attorney, said tonight the grand jury would inquire tomorrow into illegal operations reported to have been performed on at least four girl students of one high school.

He predicted indictments would be returned, ranging from misdemeanor charges to one of murder resulting from an alleged criminal operation.

Kenneth Haygood, 19 years old, was being sought by police as the alleged keeper of a disorderly house frequented by high school boys and girls and other minors not attending school. Investigators charged that vice flourished at the resort and that drunkenness was common.

"Matters already investigated by the grand jury and appearing to give ground for indictments involve 190 school children," Williford said. "I believe that we have just begun to get into this thing."

E. E. Oberholtzer, superintendent of schools, blamed the "wide open attitude in the home."

"The dad wants to carry on," he said, "and the children do, too."

The presentation was made by Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio. He was accompanied to the White House by Mrs. Laura Gardin, designer of the medal, and Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, associate director of the commission.

Mother of 3 Requests Aid Of Post Fund on Christmas

She Is Assured of Help as Toy Collections Reach $167.

Is there a Santa Claus?

Thousands of little children in this city are asking harassed parents this question. Many fathers and mothers will only be able to answer it satisfactorily this year through The Post Toy and Doll Fund organized to bring to every needy child "A Merry Christmas" of toys and good cheer.

The officials of The Post Toy and Doll Fund, which will be distributed through the Council of Social Agencies to the needy children through affiliated welfare and relief groups, were asked the question yesterday by an anxious mother, the only bread winner in a family of five.

In her note to The Post Toy and Doll Fund this mother wrote:

"In giving out your Christmas clothes and toys to the poor and needy I beg of you not to forget my three little girls, aged 3, 4 and 5 years. Their father has been out of work for a long time, and I, too. But now I have a job, for which I am very thankful. Every penny I earn must go for food and shelter. The children are asking me every day 'Is there a Santa Claus?' I pass the question on to the good people of The Post Toy and Doll Fund to answer for my darlings."

Yes, dear, hard-working mother, brave in the battle of life for the sake of those you love, there is a Santa Claus. Or rather, there is a Christmas spirit, a glad wraith of memories of happy Christmases, of blessings bestowed and the warm glow of affection for human beings which will put into the hearts of men and women reading The Washington Post this morning the desire to insure a Merry Christmas for your little ones. You can tell them there is a Santa Claus. There will always be one so long as the desire to serve others exists in the human heart. And, strange to say, little mother of three of our future citizens, you, yourself are one of the proofs of the existence of this Christmas spirit.

Friends of little children gave a big push to the Post Toy and Doll Fund snowball yesterday which rolled it up to the sum of $167.25. This is within striking distance of that second hundred dollars which the fund hopes to be able to report by tomorrow night.

One of the most interesting gifts of the day came in matching Ding-How's magic dime. It was a check for $3, from Siren, Pixie and Sinbad of E L ranch, Montana, the ponies of Charles, Patricia, and Calvert Benedict. Here is the cunning note which accompanied the check:

"Ding-How of Hydegree,
"Grand Master of the Toy Fund:
"The Washington Post, City.

"Honored Canine: Will your dignity kindly accept the inclosed check, accompanied by all our good wishes for the success of your enterprise?"

Ding-How was greatly pleased and sent his regards to the three ponies with his thanks. Another gift was received by this mascot of The Junior Post yesterday, $1 as an offering in memory of Chulali, a Pekingese, from Judy, another Pekingese.

Ding-How asked The Junior Post editor to repeat the announcement that he will be in his office on the fifth floor of The Washington Post Building tomorrow morning from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. to receive in person gifts from callers wishing to contribute to The Post Toy and Doll Fund. Ding-How also requested the children and adults who call on him to be unaccompanied by their pets. He is afraid dog fights in his headquarters might disturb the editors and reporters busy with the task of getting out The Sunday Washington Post.

DAVISON SAYS U. S. FOURTH AIR POWER

Five New Squadrons Needed to Protect Hawaii and Panama.

(Associated Press.)

The United States stands fourth in relative air strength in comparison with other major powers.

This was stated yesterday by F. Truebee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War for Air, who based his estimate on the full air strength this country could employ in a particular operation where armies, navies and air forces would be used to their full capacity.

Five additional pursuit squadrons remain to be organized to complete the overseas air defenses in Panama and Hawaii in the Army's aviation expansion scheme, Davison said in his annual report covering the so-called five-year development program of the air corps. The program has not been completed on schedule because of curtailment of appropriations.

But Davison reported progress in the expansion plans, noting that during the fiscal year ended last June 30 four additional pursuit squadrons and two bombardment squadrons, together with certain auxiliary units, were reconstituted.

Atlantic City Employes Fail to Get Pay Checks

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—There was no pay today for any city employes, including those of the public schools, covering the last half of November. Due to tax delinquencies the $200,000 pay roll could not be made up, Finance Director Paxson announced.

Paxson said payment depended entirely on the amount of taxes that are paid on real and personal property, due today.

DIED

O'BRIEN—On Thursday, December 1, 1932, at Providence Hospital, THERESA C., beloved aunt of George T. and Robert E. O'Brien, of 712 Seventh street northeast.
Funeral from the above residence on Saturday, December 3, at 8:30 a. m. Solemn high requiem mass will be held at Holy Name Church at 9 o'clock. Interment at Mount Olivet Cemetery. Relatives and friends invited.

HAVENNER HONORED BY ANACOSTIA BODY

Tribute Paid to Founder by Citizens' Group as Garden Cup Is Presented.

Making the presentation of the Bicentennial Garden Cup to Anacostia the occasion, the Anacostia Citizens Association last night honored its founder, Dr. George C. Havenner, for his services to the community and to the city.

The cup for the community showing the most improvement in its gardens and lawns was awarded to Anacostia by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, in a ceremony in the Anacostia Masonic Temple. Dr. Havenner received the trophy on behalf of the association.

A bronze medal for the best garden in the community was awarded to John C. Cook, of 1517 T street southeast, by Mrs. Lillian Wright Smith, herself a landscape gardener. A lounging robe, the gift of the costume room of the Washington Bicentennial, was also given to Dr. Havenner.

A resolution congratulating Dr. Havenner for his work as executive secretary of the Washington Bicentennial Commission, for his services as president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and for his efforts as a member of the Citizens Advisory Board was adopted by the Anacostia association.

Dr. Havenner, who lives at 1745 Minnesota avenue southeast, has lived in Anacostia for 38 years, and has been president of the association for more than 25.

BOTH PARTIES WORK TO BALANCE BUDGET

that this program could be accomplished before March 4.

Seeking his goal of $700,000,000 reduction in the Government budget for next year, President Hoover was canvassing every avenue of economy and was reported by some congressional leaders to be looking upon a flat pay cut for Federal workers as one method. This, however, was not verified at the White House.

Hoover Busy on Message.

The budget message will be submitted to Congress, probably, next Wednesday. Meanwhile, the President is working on his final annual message to Congress, to be delivered Tuesday.

Senator Robinson also spoke yesterday of Democratic plans for extending some relief for holders of farm mortgages—a subject, stressed by Gov. Roosevelt in his Warm Springs, Ga., parleys. Just what can be accomplished in this direction awaits further meetings among the legislators.

The Democratic leader announced that a party conference of senators would be called immediately and steps taken to prepare legislation dealing particularly with economy, farm relief and prohibition.

Meanwhile, the bipartisan economy committee of the Senate under the leadership of Senator Bingham (Republican), Cannecticut, met to get an early start on the work facing it.

McCarl Summoned.

Director Roop of the budget talked the situation over with the committee. Postmaster General Brown, Veterans Administrator Hines and Comptroller McCarl were asked to appear today.

Senator Robinson, in talking with newspapermen, asserted the Democrats in the Senate "will do their best to see that immediate steps are taken to carry out campaign promises."

"There is no reason I can foresee," he said, "why the short session should not lay much of the groundwork necessary to national recovery. It is certainly the intention of the Democrats to do all in their power to make use of every moment and every opportunity that presents itself, betwen now and the fourth of March, to be of actual service to the nation."

HERRIOT FORWARDS FRENCH DEBT NOTE

Delay Based on Paris Hope Stimson Gets English Document First.

Paris, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Premier Herriot sent the new French request for postponement of the $20,000,000 interest payment due the United States December 15 to Ambassador Paul Claudel in Washington tonight.

The document probably will be delivered to Secretary Stimson tomorrow morning. It is a short summary of the French position and contains about a half-dozen pages.

The French note was approved and officially polished at a cabinet meeting today over which President Albert Lebrun presided. Delay in dispatching the note across the ocean was ascribed in official quarters to desire that the note arrive for Secretary Stimson's desk after the British note on the same subject.

The contents were not published officially tonight, but it was generally understood that the main argument of the first French memorandum to Washington will be renewed, namely, that postponement is necessary in the best interests of everybody.

Premier Herriot won a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies tonight on the government's recent conversion of public loans, but his reported willingness to pay the American installment if Washington insists has raised the ire of a large group of deputies. The government won another skirmish earlier in the day when it persuaded the legislators to defer debate on the war debt issue until after other matters have been cleared from the docket.

The premier was said to be willing to stand or fall on the debt question, but he intends to go the limit in the direction of postponement before he makes the matter a question of confidence in the chamber.

Nearness of Christmas Cuts Down Sentences

Judicial notice of the nearness of Christmas was shown in Police Court yesterday when Judge Ralph Given issued twenty-day sentences to a number of men charged with drunkenness, so that they could be out for the holidays.

However, Judge Given warned the boys that they had better not celebrate too well when they return to civilian life at that time.

U. S. AGENCIES ASK DROPPING OF LEGISLATIVE FURLOUGHS

present law, the Interstate Commerce Commission asked that the impounding clause be amended to allow payment of salaries out of impounded funds where this would prevent or reduce administrative furloughs.

"The law requires a statutory furlough of one month for each of our employes, and the present language compels an additional month for all of them, and much longer furloughs for many of them," the commission wrote.

Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of Public Buildings and Public Parks, proposed that Congress do away with legislative furloughs and permit employing officers to keep within reduced appropriations by administrative furloughs and adjustments of pay within certain limits.

The Federal Power Commission, recommending against continuance of the furlough, urged a straight percentage pay cut, or application of the five-day week with reduced pay scales, "if the financial condition of the Government is such as to necessitate continued temporary reductions in compensation."

Warns of Inefficiency.

"Government employes are relatively worse off in times of inflated prices," wrote Chairman George Otis Smith, of the Federal Power Commission. "Stability of employment at a stable wage is one of the chief incentives attracting individuals to the Government service. Uncertain employment and unsteady wages will bring about a greater turnover in personnel, thus creating inefficiency and increasing Government expenditure."

Herbert C. Hengstler, chief of the Division of Foreign Service Administration of the State Department, wrote the committee that United States foreign service officers had been forced to take a 40 per cent cut in rental allowances and had "suffered very greatly from the combined effect of reduced appropriations and the economy act." Salaries offered virtually the only field for retrenchment in the State Department, he pointed out.

The United States Board of Mediation recommended that the whole subject of furloughs, with other considerations, such as impounding requirements, "be clarified and made definite."

Farm Board Complaint.

The Federal Farm Board advised the senators that drastic cuts in personnel already "is seriously crippling the work of the board and threatens a setback to the progress already made in cooperative development."

The Smithsonian Institution, the United States Employes Compensation Commission and the United States Tariff Commission wrote that existing appropriations are scarcely sufficient to permit these agencies to carry on their work even with the most rigid economy. The Shipping Board complained of economy act impounding provisions which prevent it from transferring balances from one year to the next.

The Civil Service Commission made the most comprehensive report. Aside from urging discontinuance of the legislative furlough, President Thomas E. Campbell advised that suspension of promotions under the economy act be placed in the discard, along with the practice of requiring presidential authority for vacancy filling.

Married Workers Clause Hit.

He also recommended rescinding of the clause requiring dismissal of married workers, where husband and wife are employed in the Federal service. In limiting the amount of retired pay, he recommended that no person receiving retired pay either from civil or military establishments be eligible for additional Government service while they are drawing retired compensation.

He advised a straight seven-day annual sick leave allowance, in lieu of the present 30-day allowance, but recommended that sick leave of absence not taken be permitted to accumulate for use in case of extended illness. He charged "abuse" of the present 30-day arrangement.

Campbell suggested that it may be advisable, depending on appropriations for future years, to include in permanent legislation the principle of administrative furloughing. The administrative furlough left to the discretion of department heads should not be confused with the "legislative furlough" of 30 days ordered in the economy act.

Plan for Hearing Workers.

Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, acting chairman of the Senate economy committee, in announcing open hearings for Government employes tomorrow morning, made it clear there will not be time for individual testimony. Workers appearing must represent one of the recognized employes' organizations, he said.

Meanwhile, members of the Senate are expectantly awaiting the President's message to Congress next week, expected to contain not only his suggestions for reducing expenditures, but the White House program for raising new revenues.

Reports that the President is considering recommending a flat 10 per cent pay cut for Federal workers, could not be confirmed.

Wife of Veteran Santa Dies; Substitute Asked

There will be a new Santa Claus at the Columbia Heights Christmas celebration this year. The familiar greeting and cheery smile of William A. Bresnahan, 2207 First street northwest, will be missing and a substitute will be appointed in his place.

Bresnahan, who for a number of years has thrilled hundreds of youngsters taking part in the annual holiday festival along upper Fourteenth street northwest, requested the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association to appoint a new Santa. Bresnahan's wife recently died, and he felt that he lacked the "proper spirit" to carry on.

MRS. ABELL VICTIM OF GAS IN BALTIMORE

Mother of George Abell Is Found Dead in Apartment.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 1.—Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth C. Abell, who was found asphyxiated in her apartment here, will be held Saturday morning. Burial will be in the New Cathedral Cemetery.

Mrs. Abell entertained at bridge at her home last night, her guests departing about 1 a. m.

As has been her custom, Mrs. Abell then went to the apartment kitchen to warm a bottle of milk for her infant grandchild, Robert, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben J. Reber. When Mr. Reber found Mrs. Abell this morning about 6 o'clock the water pan was on the gas stove and gas was issuing from a burner under it. It was presumed that Mrs. Abell dozed while the water boiled over and extinguished the flame.

Born in Washington, Mrs. Abell was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milford Lackey, and was a niece of Mrs. Edwin Abell. She was the first wife of Charles S. Abell and was divorced in 1910.

Besides Mrs. Reber, formerly Miss Elizabeth Abell, Mrs. Abell is survived by three sons, George Abell, of Washington; Francis Abell, of this city, and Charles S. Abell, jr., of Miami.

EXTRA SESSION SEEN ON FARM AID PLAN

farmer, Mr. Roosevelt suggested that Hill get in touch with the agricultural committee of the Senate and House which now are engaged in discussions of plans for the legislation.

Mr. Roosevelt said plans for legislation for refinancing farm mortgages were also being considered by the banking committees.

The delegation from the Crusaders for economic liberty was led by George Christians, president of the organization, and W. M. Higgins, of Chattanooga.

They asked approval of their measure which was introduced last session at the request of Christians by Representative McFadden (Republican), Pennsylvania, a former chairman of the House banking committee.

The bill called for replacing the present monetary system with one which would base currency on the wages for unskilled labor and attempt to stabilize these wages at a level of 42.62 cents an hour.

Christians said after leaving the President-elect that his group had a very satisfactory talk with Mr. Roosevelt and that as a result a demonstration that had been planned for Warm Springs if they had been refused an interview would be called off.

ROOSEVELT ARTICLE FOR DEBT PAYMENT

Aid Is Only Common Sense, but Calls Cancellation Without Honor.

New York, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Cosmopolitan Magazine today made public quotations from an article written by President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, which appears in its January issue, declaring flatly for payment of war debts.

"Debts owed the United States by foreign governments must be paid," the announcement quotes Roosevelt's article as saying.

"It is sound common sense to assist your debtors in every way, but there is neither practicality nor honor in cancellation," the article continues. "The stabilization of world finance can best be achieved by a clear understanding of just obligations. A policy unduly favoring foreign private loans has resulted in more great sums being owed us; has failed to achieve any real international unity, economic or otherwise, and has confirmed foreign hopes for the repudiation of debts.

"The new international leadership will deal fairly, honestly and sanely with this situation. It will remember, however, that as society is now organized, we are divided into nations, and that it is the duty of your national administration first to consider the welfare of its own people.

"I strongly feel that the welfare of the world depends just as much upon yourselves as it does upon others, but there is only one view to be taken of these great money obligations between nations. These sums represent national labor, the labor of a great mass of individuals."

LABOR WILL BATTLE FOR 30-HOUR WEEK

sponsible for our millions of unemployed.

"So far as I can, I shall arouse the fighting spirit of the men of labor. We will draw up the lines of battle and carry the struggle to the doors of industry until the jobless are given jobs."

Labor, he said, had pleaded impotently with industry and government for aid for the jobless.

"Now," he demanded, "what do they expect us to do? Sit still?"

Two days ago Green declared labor would use "force of some kind" if necessary to secure its end, and defined "force" as strikes and boycotts. Today he replied to comments that labor should seek its aims by conciliatory methods.

Militant Spirit.

It was many minutes before the demonstration, which was the greatest of the convention, had subsided, and the delegates again started drumming at resolutions in their struggle to clear away the program for possible adjournment tomorrow.

Earlier, in the same martial spirit, it had instructed its executive committee to "fight to keep racketeering out of organized labor."

Without hesitation, its annual convention adopted a resolution opposing "the rackets" as read by Matthew Woll, third vice president and chairman of the resolutions committee.

"More and more," it said, "do we find those of criminal tendencies and unconcerned in the well-being of the wage earners endeavoring to gain control of our trade unions."

Its stand indirectly pledged support of the whole of organized labor to the Brewery Workers and Beverage Dispensers Union, which a few days ago announced plans to fight to keep gangsters from seizing control of their organizations against the time, when perhaps, beer is legalized.

Pullman Unions Scored.

At the same time, pushing its work in efforts to reach adjournment, and stirred by A. Philip Randolph, Negro president of the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters, the convention ordered its council to send out an appeal for funds to back the porters in legal battles against "Pullman companies and company unions."

Reaffirming opposition to "private profits" in U. S. Navy building projects, the delegates adopted a resolution that all construction undertaken should be done "as far as possible" in Government yards, arsenals and factories.

Further, they struck out against insurance company penetration of the workmen's compensation field and declared for State-controlled compensation system.

Again the recommendation of the resolutions committee, a declaration "of unalterable hostility to Communism; to the recognition of the Communist regime at Moscow by our Government and to every activity of organized Communism," was adopted.

Independence for the Philippines and old age pensions were reindorsed, and a proposal to work out Federal legislation to limit working hours of women and children was referred to the council.

Convention Denounces Prison Manufactures

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Opposition to "prison labor in every State" was expressed in a resolution adopted unanimously by the American Federation of Labor convention today.

The resolution protested particularly against "the policy of the Lorton (Va.) Reformatory employing prisoners on skilled labor."

Clyde M. Mills, of Washington, representing the Central Labor Union of Washington, said the Maryland prison "is more a manufacturing plant than a prison."

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

RECREATION is the safety valve for a Government employe's workaday. If "all work and no play" holds good for Jack, there is just as much truth in it for the national family.

Bowling has fastened a firm grip on the thoughts and activities of thousands of men and women, as well, in Government service. In the Internal Revenue Department alone there are more than 50 teams of bowlers and they roll a mean duckpin ball.

The Interbureau League and Dynamite Bowling League are only two of the many others. Step into any bowling alley after 4:30 p. m. and you'll find not an alley idle. The crash of the little rollers fairly fills the air with splashing pins.

The Dynamite Bowling League is a good example of the enthusiasm shown in bowling. The comradeship, whetted even though it is by intense rivalry, finds Howard T. Jones, assistant director, Prohibition Bureau, getting down from his official dignity and rolling with the "other boys." Mr. Jones, by the way, is president of the league.

The Blowhards, Dri-Kleeners, Duds, Hiandrys, Hill-Billies, Lab-Katz, Little Potatoes, Sand Blowers, Tornadoes and Wrecking Crew are member teams.

V. Simonton, assistant chief counsel, Prohibition Bureau, and captain of the Blowhards, speaking of the league in general, finds competition at more than blood heat. All in the cause of greater efficiency for the Government worker.

Some men even find time during lunch period to score a few strikes and spares, not to mention the troublesome splits. All in all, the Government worker remembers to keep fit after getting on the job. Better work, better health, better humor and better results from the first to the fifteenth and from the fifteenth to the first of every month. It helps bureaus to break the "ice" while tackling problems when personnel gets back on the job.

SWARMI FEDD cups his hands over the crystal ball once more. Sees all, hears all and MIGHT tell all:

Walker Chapman, Interstate Commerce Commission, still sounding sentiment for a gliding club—safe as any thrilling sport, and easy on the purse, says he.

Robert E. Lynch, assistant corporation counsel, still looking for that Supreme Court decision regarding Rock Creek Park firehouse, which has been hanging fire.

Fire Chief George Watson must take time out for recuperation. Throat ill.

"Interference Division," Department of Commerce. So we're really got a division on "interference?"

Time out, there goes Barytone Edward F. Ludwig, foreign and domestic commerce. And he still has a sheaf of papers, going somewhere. A hand-painted paper nightcap to the one who sees him sometime without some papers. What do you say, Emil, time for a new start on that cooperative store?

If we had the smile of Fire Battalion Chief Edward R. Pierce, 22 years service, we'd be rich. . . . A smile is something intangible but it can be shared with others. . . . Like advice, but more readily accepted.

Marie Leffingwell, foreign and domestic commerce, looks us over as though she expected to see spats also. . . . Well, they do make good "uppers," they say.

O. P. Hopkins, assitant director of foreign and domestic trade, surrounded by relief maps—but no connection with the relief program.

Then there is the imported straw goat, a present, complete with red ribbons . . . Every one who sees that goat picks it up for examination . . . If he has optimism he then prepares to shed it.

Genial Ralph Norton, secretary to Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, retired, Commissioner.

Hear William Coleman, District Building messenger, is fighting toward recovery from that automobile accident . . . William, always quick and ready.

Gosh, but Beatrice Young (Beatrice A, if you must know), is uncommunicative about last week-end's trip to Philadelphia, and that makes us wonder just whom she went to see.

In case you have noticed why Betty Blout is so cool to masculine employes at the War Department, we might mention the name of a certain doctor, who calls for her in his shiny new coupe, medical emblem and all.

Charles W. (as in Wronskivitch) Marshall, who has been with the Bureau of Printing and Engraving since Lord Nelson was an ordinary seaman, told a friend he didn't see how Swarmi Fedd (the old peerer, himself) could know enough individuals to keep the crystal gazing sailing along (since we are in a nautical frame of mind) for any great length of time. * * * Well, Charley, suppose we indicate just how much we know by taking up the subject of your "dawncing." * * * You'd rather we didn't? Well, we don't think the subject so hot, either—or rather the subject's dancing—And by the way, do you know a guy named Keyser?

And now, Swarmi Fedd, eyes heavy from gazing, signs off.

WHEN there was the South African delegate to the Ottawa conference, who came to Washington and attended a dinner function. It was hot, not the function. Broiling summer. The busboy elbowed between the dinner guests, ice bowl well balanced. "No ice, please, no ice," pleaded the D. to the O. C. Each time, "No ice, please," just in time to stop the sliding ice on the tongs. It went along six times. The seventh time, the busboy, still forgetting "No ice," slipped a cube into the glass at the elbow of the D. to the O. C. "Oh, hell, what's the use, I give up," gesticulated the dignified D. to the O. C., whereupon he gulped the ice water. Another story from the storehouse of O. P. Thirty-five years' continuous service for the Government have ended for John C. Dalphin, administrative clerk, Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital, who was retired Thursday.

Twenty-six years of Mr. Dalphin's service have been spent in Washington. He entered employ of the U. S. engineers at Boston, Mass., in 1898. Nine years later he was transferred to Washington and to the Office of Public Buildings and Grounds. Later he became chief clerk of this organization.

DEMOCRATS ENJOY ARLINGTON BANQUET

Mrs. Nellie Ross Talks at Clarendon Victory Celebration.

The Democrats of Arlington County celebrated their victory in the recent election, the first in sixteen years, at a banquet last night in Odd Fellows Hall, Clarendon. More than 200 attended. Mrs. Katherine M. Rogers, president of the Arlington County Women's Democratic Club, acted as toastmaster. The invocation was given by the Rev. George Edwin McDorman.

Representative Hearsill Ragon, of Arkansas, the principal speaker, declared that the recovery of business depended upon the restoration of agriculture. Concerning the recent campaign, he said that Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, delivered the best speech made by either party.

In commenting on the economic policies of President-elect Roosevelt, the speaker declared the President-elect does not propose to reduce the salaries of the small clerks, but proposes to cut the cost of government through consolidation of bureaus and the elimination of unnecessary organizations.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, vice chairman of the national Democratic committee, who flew from New York to attend the banquet, declared that "big business need have no fears as to the new administration," but she warned no businesses would be shown any favoritism under the new regime. She lauded the women for their active work in the campaign, especially the women of Arlington County.

Other special guests at the banquet were Representative Howard W. Smith, of the Eighth Virginia District; State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax; Miss Louise Pailligan, vice chairman of the Young Democrats of America; Mrs. Lester J. Pollock, founder of the Women's Democratic Education Foundation; Mrs. Lydia Mae Francis, assistant to Mrs. Ross, and John Gallagher, president of the Young Democrats of Virginia.

The banquet was served by the home fund committee of the Rebekah lodge, with Mrs. Eula Clements in charge.

Home in Kensington Is Damaged by Blaze

Fire of undetermined origin last night badly damaged the frame dwelling house of William Newton near the Kensington Railroad station. The flames were visible for several miles and attracted a large crowd of spectators.

Mr. Newton, one of the oldest inhabitants of Kensington, called the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department, which succeeded in extinguishing the fire after a fight of more than an hour. The damage was estimated at between $250 and $500.

Barn and Outbuildings Near Fairfax Burned

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed a barn and outbuildings on the farm of Clarence Mercer, near Fairfax, Va., yesterday afternoon. The fire was discovered by neighbors who assisted in rescuing several animals from the flaming structure.

The barn was located on the old Oakton-Germantown road about a mile northeast of Fairfax. The Volunteer Fire Departments from Fairfax and Vienna responded to the alarm and kept the flames from spreading to the house. The loss was estimated to be about $2,000.

POLICEMAN FREED IN SHOOTING CASE

Defendant Acquitted When He Pleads Amnesia in Firing of Pistol.

Policeman William E. Atkinson, of the Ninth Precinct, was acquitted of a charge of an assault with a dangerous weapon upon Lewis P. Martell, a taxicab driver, of Cherrydale, Va., yesterday in the District Supreme Court. A jury, sitting in the court of Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, found Atkinson not guilty after a short deliberation.

Testimony at the trial showed that Atkinson had been under a severe nervous strain for several days preceding October 17, the date upon which he was charged with having shot at Martell. He was on duty at the Ninth Precinct until within a few hours of the affair, and fellow policemen testified that he appeared pale and nervous.

Martell's story is that Atkinson approached a bus driven by Russell D. Insley, at Nineteenth and H streets northwest and told the driver to take him to Georgetown. After a dispute Atkinson got into Martell's cab, where another dispute arose, and the officer emptied his gun, firing at random.

In his own defense Atkinson said that after he boarded a street car at Eighth and F streets northeast, he remembered nothing until he found himself in custody. Attorney Michael J. Lane represented Atkinson.

Driver Is Found Guilty On Manslaughter Charge

A jury in Montgomery County Circuit Court, at Rockville, Md., yesterday found Karl Brown, colored, 36 years old, of Washington, guilty on a charge of manslaughter. Brown was tried before Judge Arthur D. Willard.

Brown was alleged to have been the driver of an automobile which struck and fatally injured Walter E. Early, of Washington, on Decoration Day. Early had started to raise the hood of his automobile to look for the cause of engine trouble when he was struck by a heavy sedan belonging to Paul F. Myers, of Chevy Chase, Md., operated by Brown, employed as a chauffeur.

ST. MARY'S TABLET UNVEILING SUNDAY

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

In connection with the unveiling in St. Mary's Catholic Cemetery at 3 p. m. Sunday of a bicentennial tablet to St. Mary's Church, the first of that denomination in Virginia, this being the gift of the Holy Name Society of Sacred Heart Church, Vallsburgh section, the grave of a hero of the Revolutionary War, which has just been discovered in the cemetery and which is near the speaker's stand, will be decorated. The stone, discovered by John G. Eberhardt, for many years the superintendent of the cemetery, is that of Lawrence Hurdle, who, according to the inscription, died December 1, 1848, in his ninety-eighth year.

Another grave that will attract attention is that of Cavan Bos, who was employed as a tailor for three years at Mount Vernon, and who died in 1798.

Mrs. Robert M. Reese, general chairman of all groups of the antique exhibit being staged in Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, under auspices of Mount Vernon Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, announced yesterday that owing to the many requests to continue the exhibit longer than the time first specified, the decision had been reached to keep it open tomorrow from 10 a. m. to. 9 p. m.

Pupils of St. Agnes Episcopal School visited the exhibit on Wednesday and more than 200 Alexandria high school students attended yesterday.

Mrs. Anna Agnes Mess, 57, wife of Dr. Carl Mess, died on Wednesday at her home on Braddock Heights. Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow from St. Rita's Catholic Church, Mount Ida, and burial will be in Forest Glen Cemetery, Md.

Club Is Organized To Protect Game

Fort Humphreys Officers and Men Striving to Ban Poaching.

In order to protect and help preserve the game birds and to keep down unauthorized hunting and fishing, Col. E. H. Schulz, C. E., the commanding officer of Fort Humphreys, Va., has lately authorized the establishment of the "Fort Humphreys Rod and Gun Club." This is made up mostly of enlisted men on duty at Fort Humphreys, but civilians in the surrounding country and officers are allowed to join.

Last year there was a great deal of damage done to fish and game birds around Fort Humphreys. Illegal fishing, particularly, was rampant as was illegal hunting.

With the excellent cooperation of the county officials and especially W. Harry Johnson, the State Game Warden, and by deputizing the members of the Fort Humphreys Rod and Gun Club, these illegal practices have been largely stamped out. One man was heavily fined for illegal fishing, and two nets worth almost $150 each, have been confiscated.

U. S. Secret Service Chief Marks 50th Year of Work

William H. Moran, Who Has Guarded Lives of Four Presidents and Is Protecting the President-Elect, Congratulated by Officials Headed by Mills.

Secretary Mills of the Treasury headed the host of officials who yesterday dropped in the office of William H. Moran, chief of the Secret Service, to offer congratulations.

Moran was celebrating the anniversary of his fiftieth year in the United States Secret Service. He has been chief of the organization since 1918. In that time he has guarded the lives of Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge, President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt.

White-haired and soft of speech, Moran is a Presbyterian deacon and a bass choir singer. To members of the service he is known as "The Chief" and in return he refers to his men as "The Boys."

He refused yesterday to discuss incidents connected with his duties, and only smiled when reminded that he was the first "chief" to protect a President on official duty in Europe. He has few theories about crime. His men are selected for their intelligence and politeness.

He works in a Treasury office which looks out upon the White House, wears conservative clothes, smokes slim long cigars, and speaks quietly while his brown eyes, from behind glasses, search the visitor's face.

TEXT OF BRITISH WAR DEBT NOTE TO U. S.

LAUSANNE ACCORD TERMED IN DANGER

Fall in Commodity Prices Also Called Obstacle to Full Payments.

(Associated Press.)

The text of the British note which Ambassador Lindsay yesterday handed to Secretary Stimson seeking an extension of the moratorium on intergovernmental debts follows:

1. In their note of November 10 his majesty's government in the United Kingdom put forward a request to the United States Government to enter upon discussing with a view to the adjustment of the British war debt, and at the same time they suggested a suspension of the payment due on December 15, their purpose being to avoid the financial and political unsettlement which must follow a resumption of war debt payments, to avert the intensification of the present world depression by the further disturbance of the exchanges, to foster the revival of commercial confidence—of which some hesitating signs have recently appeared—and finally to allow of a close examination between the United States and Great Britain of the whole subject in preparation for the International Economic Conference.

2. His majesty's government warmly welcome that part of the reply of the United States Government in which they express their willingness to facilitate such discussions and, noting that it does not appear to the United States Government that sufficient reasons have been given for their request for a suspension of the December instalment, they now propose to set out in greater detail the consideration which actuated them in presenting their previous note.

SECTION I.

3. The war produced a profound disorder in the course of international trade and after fourteen years this disorder has culminated in a crisis of unparalleled severity. It has resulted in a general collapse of trade throughout the civilized world, with widespread unemployment and a disastrous fall in all national incomes, including those of both the United States of America and of the United Kingdom. The causes of the depression may be manifold, but it has been generally recognized that war debts and reparations have been one of the major causes, and that a settlement of these debts, which will relieve world anxieties under this head, is an indispensable condition of a revival of general prosperity. As the Bale committee declared in December last, "the adjustment of all reparations and war debts to the troubled situation of the world is the only lasting step capable of establishing confidence, which is the very condition of economic stability and real peace." The committee proceeded, "we appeal to the governments on whom the responsibility for action rests to permit of no delay in coming to decisions which will bring an amelioration of this grave crisis which weighs so heavily on all alike." While in some respects it may be difficult for governments to remedy the troubles of the world, there are certain steps which it is clearly within their powers and their responsibility to take.

Loans Were Taken In Form of Goods.

4. The system of war debts was called into being by the war requirements of the belligerent nations. The resources in manpower and production of the allied countries had from 1914 been wholly employed in the prosecution of the war; their normal trading activities were to a large extent suspended and they had, therefore, less than their normal resources available for purchases abroad. But the vast requirements for war purposes in any case far exceeded any normal means to pay and could only be financed by means of loans from producing countries The loans raised, whether they were market loans or government loans, were taken not in the form of money but in the form of goods and enormously augmented the volume of the exports of the lending countries. For example, before 1915 the United States export surplus normally varied from $200,000,000 to $600,000,000. In 1917 and 1918 it exceeded $3,000,000,000, and in 1919 it was about $4,000,000,000. The United States made loans to the allies (including the United Kingdom) totaling approximately $10,000,000,000 (£2,055,000,000 at par); the United Kingdom made loans to its European allies amounting to £1,800,000,000, equivalent (at par) to $7,800,000,000; the French government had made similar loans equivalent (at par) to $2,237,000,000. In the aggregate these loans reach the colossal total of approximately $20,000,000,000 (equivalent at par to over £4,000,000,000).

5. If the course of commerce were deflected to the extent required to repay these war-time debts, it would entail a radical alteration in the economy both of debtor and of creditor countries. During the first few years after the war this was recognized and no attempt was made to collect them. But it proved impossible to secure a general agreement for their remission and the debtor powers were called upon to fund their engagements. From 1923 onward a series of agreements were concluded providing for their repayment on varying terms, and in 1924 a provisional settlement was reached of German reparations on the basis of the Dawes plan.

The annuities provided for in most of these agreements were low during the earlier years, and their payment was rendered possible by the flow of investment capital from the United States of America to the continent of Europe, which was then taking place. But the prosperous period from 1923 to 1929 was to a large extent illusory and the seeds of future trouble had already been sowed.

Disintegration Progresses To Point of Liquidations.

6. In the summer of 1929 the storm that was brewing was not yet visible, and it was hoped that conditions were sufficiently stabilized for a final settlement of reparations in the form of the Young plan under which Germany undertook to pay annuities of about $500,000,000 (£100,000,000 at par) of which the major part was passed on as war-debt payments. Unhappily almost before the ink had dried on the agreements embodying the Young plan the storm had burst upon the world. Startled and alarmed, lenders who for five years so liberally poured their capital into the Continent of Europe withdrew such funds as were immediately recoverable. The debtors made desperate efforts to meet their liabilities, but confidence became more and more shaken and toward the middle of 1931 something like a panic prevailed. Since then the world has been living under the stress of repeated shocks which have completely undermined the confidence on which the system of investment depended. The process of disintegration has been pursued to the point where it has become an attempt to liquidate not only private fortunes and industries, but whole countries.

Currencies are threatened with instability if not with collapse and controls and restrictions intended to remedy the trouble have merely aggravated it. Everywhere taxation has been ruthlessly increased and expenditure drastically curtailed and yet budgets are in deficit or are balanced with ever increasing difficulty. In all directions there are signs of paralysis of trade and the threat of bankruptcy and of financial collapse.

The international monetary mechanism without which the modern world can not effectively conduct its daily life is being broken into pieces with all the manifold forms of privation and distres which this involves.

The countries of the world can not even begin to consider how to restore this mechanism until the causes which underminded confidence have been removed. One of the most important of these is the system of intergovernmental debts.

Intergovernmental Debts Differ From Trade Loans.

7. These intergovernmental debts are radically different from commercial loans raised by foreign governments on the market for productive purposes. Such commercial loans are normally self-liquidating. The market loans thus raised during the last 100 years have converted whole territories from desolate swamps or uninhabited plains to flourishing provinces teeming with human life and producing great additions to the wealth of the world. Such productive loans directly afford means whereby the borrower can repay them with interest and at the same time become more prosperous.

But reparations and war loans represent expenditure on destruction. Fertile fields were rendered barren and populous cities shattered ruins. Such expenditure instead of producing a slow and steady accumulation of wealth destroys in a few hours stored-up riches of the past.

Like the shells on which they were largely spent, these loans were blown to pieces. They have produced nothing to repay them and they have left behind nothing but fresh complications and perplexities.

8. Repayment of these war debts necessitates unnatural transfers which provoke widespread economic evil. Insofar as they have been paid in the past their payment was made possible directly or indirectly by further foreign lending on the part of creditor countries which temporarily conceal but eventually aggravate the difficulties.

In the long run international debts can only be paid in the form of goods or services. But as the able report of August 18, 1931, truly pointed out "in recent years the world has been endeavoring to pursue two contradictory policies in permitting the development of an international financial system which involves the annual payment of large sums by debtor to creditor countries while at the same time putting obstacles in the way of the free movement of goods. So long as these obstacles remain, such movements of capital must necessarily throw the world's financial balance out of equilibrium."

The creditors insofar as they have refused acceptance of payment in goods have compelled their debtors to pay in gold. This has led to a drain on the gold reserves of many countries, and this in turn has forced up the price of gold in terms of commodities or in other words has forced down the price of commodities in terms of gold currencies.

Fall in Commodities Cause of Widespread Ruin.

This fall in prices has caused widespread ruin to producers in debtor and creditor countries alike and threatens disastrous social and political repercussions. It has seriously increased the burden of commercial debts, but it has rendered intolerable the pecuniary burden of unproductive war debts.

10. The difficulties of maintaining payments fixed under existing agreements first became acute in the case of Germany and despite the moratorium adopted as the result of Mr. Hoover's initiative last year, apprehensions created by the situation in that country caused large withdrawals of credits which in turn involved London as a leading international center. Consequent movements of capital forced the United Kingdom to abandon the gold standard and while sterling has remained more stable in terms of goods than gold currencies, the events of September, 1931, gave a profound shock to confidence in the monetary system throughout the world.

Thus the baneful effects of these unnatural transfers in respect of reparations and war debts have gravely accentuated the difficulties of all five continents including many countries which were neither debtors nor creditors in "the tragic bookkeeping" which resulted from the war.

Confidence and credit can not revive until an end has been put to these attempts to force the stream of capital to flow up-hill.

Renewed Payments Altogether Inconsistent.

11. In this connection it is pertinent to recall the statement made by the Secretary of the United States Treasury in his annual report for 1924-1925, that the principle of capacity to pay does not require the foreign debtor to pay to the full extent of its present or future capacity. The debtor government must, he continued, "Be permitted to preserve and improve its economic position, to bring its budget into balance and to place its finances and currency on a sound basis, and to maintain and if possible to improve the standard of living of its citizens. No settlement which is oppressive and retards the recovery and development of the foreign debtor is to the best interests of the United States or of Europe."

The resumption of war debt payments in present circumstances appears altogether inconsistent with the principles here laid down.

Experience has in fact shown that when dealing with international transfers of the character and of the unprecedented magnitude of the postwar intergovernmental obligations, the principle of "capacity to pay" of the debtor—even if thus applied—can only be regarded as of secondary importance compared with an even wider principle, viz.: that of the capacity of the world to endure the economic and financial consequences which those transfers would involve.

12. It is in the light of these wider economic and financial consequences that successive British governments have framed their well-known policy on this question which is referred to in a later passage of this note.

His Majesty's government are aware that any remission of the war debts may be criticized as transferring liability from the taxpayer in the borrowing country to the taxpayer in the lending country, and in this respect taxpayers in the United Kingdom and in the United States are in much the same position.

Both are already bearing a large share of the burden of the war debts and would continue to bear it even if all existing war debt arrangements between the governments could be maintained. For example in the case of the United Kingdom the effect of its reparation and war debt arrangements was to provide the sum sufficient to cover current payments to the United States Government. But this does not mean that the British taxpayer was relieved from his burdens in respect of the advances made to the allies during the war; on the contrary he was left to find over £80,000,000 a year ($390,000,000 at par) for interest on internal loans out of which those advances had been made. For all the reparation and war debt receipts of the United Kingdom are required to cover the current payments due on its own war debt to the United States Government and the United Kingdom taxpayer has had each year to find from his own resources the amount required for interest on advances made by the United Kingdom to the allies which, as stated above, amounted to a total of about £1,600,000,000—$7,800,000,000 at par.

In the case of the United States the amount due from foreign governments in respect of war-debt payments is now $270,000,000 a year, and if this were not received, it would increase by that amount the burden of the American taxpayer. It will be seen, therefore, that the policy which his majesty's government have consistently advocated is one which, if it involves sacrifices on the part of American taxpayers, has involved similar sacrifices on the part of their own taxpayers.

The interests of the two countries looked at from this standpoint are the same. But it would be taking altogether too narrow a view to regard those interests as being limited to securing payment of these war debts from the borrowing governments.

Tariff Barriers Present Obstacle to Payments.

13. Payments across exchange, restricted as they are by the effect of tariffs and trade barriers, are essentially different from payments made by the taxpayer in his own currency, and the burden of these vast intergovernmental debts must be judged by comparison, not with the volume of internal revenue, but with the balance of trade. So long as the debtor nations are compelled by every means to augment their export surpluses in order to meet intergovernmental-debt burdens they can not play their part in the normal economic operations of commerce and their diminished purchasing power will reflect itself in diminished receipts for producers in the creditor country with consequent fall in prices, depression of industry and unemployment.

Even a partial recovery of business activity in creditor countries as a consequence of the removal of these abnormal conditions would result in additional receipts from tax on the existing scale which would compensate the exchequers of creditor countries many times over for the loss of revenues involved in revison of the war debt settlements.

14. The loss which both the United Kingdom and the United States taxpayers would suffer from reconsideration of the war debts can not be measured in the same scales as the untold loss of wealth and human misery caused by the present economic crisis.

The value of international trade had already six months ago decreased in three years by 50 per cent or by the equivalent of $5,000,000 for every hour, night and day, that passes and the situation has since deteriorated even further.

It will not profit a creditor country to collect a few million pounds or dollars if it thereby perpetuates a world disorder which reacting on itself involves losses of revenue many times greater; and a settlement, however generous it may seem, which relieves the economic machinery of the world by clearing up these intergovernmental payments, would be repaid again and again by the contribution which it would make to world revival.

15. For the loss and suffering is not due to the niggardliness of nature. The triumphs of physical science are ever growing and the vast potentialities of the production of real wealth remain unimpaired.

Two Greatest Creditor Nations Should Cooperate.

It is in the power of the governments of the world and particularly of the United States and of the United Kingdom as the two greatest creditor nations, if they unite in cooperating, to make the first and essential step toward averting disaster, financial, economic and political.

SECTION II.

16. For the reasons given in the preceding paragraphs his majesty's government base their request for a reexamination of the whole situation on the fact that payment of the war debts has in their view been proved to be inconsistent with the present economic organization of the world and that any resumption of these payments is bound to accentuate the gravity of the present crisis and to compromise fatally all efforts to counteract it.

But apart from these general considerations, his majesty's government hold the sincere conviction that this request is fully justified on the grounds of the past record of the United Kingdom in the matter of intergovernmental debts and of their present position.

17. In the first place they would draw attention to the unprecedented efforts which have been made by the United Kingdom. The total British war expenditure in the United States amounted to approximately $12,000,000,000 (£2,400,000,000). Of this total only about one-third was financed by borrowing from the United States Government. Approximately $3,000,000,000 (£600,000,000) was obtained by the sale of gold and of securities representing available capital assets which his majesty's government had at its disposal, the transfer of which has, of course, reduced the permanent wealth of this country.

In addition his majesty's government raised commercial loans on the United States market before the entry of the United States into the war to the amount of about $1,480,000,000 (£304,000,000 at par). The balance of the British war expenditure in the United States was financed by the export of British goods and by the reimbursement on the part of the United States Government of expenditure incurred by his majesty's government on behalf of the allies and of sterling supplied by his majesty's government to the United States troops.

Of these market borrowings, $1,340,000,000 (£275,000,000) have been repaid. In respect of the debt to the United States Government, payments have been made amounting to $1,352,000,000 (£278,000,000 at par), of which $202,000,000 (£42,000,000 at par) were in respect of the principal of the debt as funded.

Furthermore, in addition to the payments under the funding agreement, his majesty's government have paid $233,000,000 (£48,000,000) in respect of war debt before funding, and they have repaid in full both the loan for the purchase of silver amounting to $122,000,000 and the debt of $16,000,000 for relief supplies to Austria.

The total of these debt payments which his majesty's government have made to the United States since the war amount to the sum of $3,063,000,000 (£629,000,000).

18. Meanwhile the United Kingdom had claims on its allies in respect of the war loans it had made. The advances made by this country amounted, as stated above, to £1,600,000,000 ($7,800,000,000), and had increased subsequently by the addition of unpaid interest to the capital. Shortly after the war his majesty's government offered to join in any equitable arrangement for the reduction or cancellation of interallied debts provided it was of an all-around character.

That proposal was not accepted and his majesty's government were called upon to fund their debt to the United States of America. They then announced that they would limit their demands on their own creditors to the amount that they were themselves required to pay to their creditor. The fact that his majesty's government were the first to fund their debt to the United States of America, and that some time elapsed before their debtors completed funding agreements with them, has resulted in their receipts from their debtors being less than half their payments to their creditor.

British Debt Share And Payments Made.

The relative position is that the United States of America made loans amounting to $10,000,000,000 (£2,055,000,000) and the United Kingdom made similar loans amounting to $7,800,000,000 (£1,600,000,000); the United States have received for the benefit of their taxpayers $2,112,000,000 (£434,000,000) and the United Kingdom have received for the benefit of their taxpayers nothing, have passed on all their receipts to the United States and have paid out of the pockets of their taxpayers to the United States $651,000,000 (£134,000,000).

In fact, when interest has been taken into account, some £200,000,000 ($973,000,000 at par) has been found by the British taxpayer.

It may be observed that while the British share of the total indebtedness to the United States is only 40 per cent of the total debt payments made to the United States 80 per cent has come from Great Britain. The efforts which this has involved to the British nation, coming as they did after the losses resulting from the war, constitute in the view of his majesty's government a strong claim to consideration on the part of the United States Government.

19. Moreover his majesty's government feel justified in calling attention to the changes of circumstances which have increased the burden of their obligations.

In the first place, the British debt is expressed in terms of gold but the burden on the British people is measured in terms of sterling. The payment due on December 15 is owing to this circumstance increased from £19,750,000 to approximately £30,000,000. The importance of this from the national standpoint needs no emphasis.

Debt Today Twice Amount Borrowed.

In fact, however, as already stated, the discharge of all international debts must in the long run take the form of a transfer of goods or services. The average wholesale price index in the United States during the period when the debt was incurred was 189 and is now under 94 (taking 1913 as a basis in each case).

The debt therefore represents today in terms of goods not less than twice the amount which was borrowed.

In this connection his majesty's government would point out that the effect of the American tariff has been to restrict rather than to facilitate the import of manufactured goods which the United Kingdom produces and the difficulties in this respect have not decreased in recent years. In 1923 when the British war debt was funded the war debt annuity amounted to £33,000,000 or approximately half the value of British domestic exports to the United States (£60 000 000).

From 1933 onward the annuity which we should have to pay in respect of the war debt would amount at the present rate of exchange to approximately £60,000,000, whereas British domestic exports to America amounted to only £18,000,000 in 1931 and are not likely to exceed £16,000,000 for 1932.

Imports into the United Kingdom from the United States show an equally remarkable fall from £211,000,000 in 1923 to £104,000,000 in 1931 and £59,000,000 in the first nine months of 1932. The total trade between the two countries from the time of the funding agreement has fallen from about £300,000,000 a year to £100,000,000.

20. If therefore war debt payments had to be resumed, it is apparent that the exchange position of this country would need to be strengthened by a reduction of the very heavy adverse balance of the visible trade of the United Kingdom and the United States which amounted to £78,000,000 in 1931.

In present circumstances this could only be done by adopting measures which would further restrict British purchases of American goods.

Britain Formerly America's Best Customer.

The United Kingdom has, up to the present, generally been the best customer of the United States and the result of such restrictions would inevitably be to reduce specially the market in the United Kingdom for American farm products.

To the extent therefore that payments were resumed to the United States Treasury a definite and unfavorable reaction must follow to the United States producer.

Moreover his majesty's government would also have to guard against the effects which would follow if the facilities offered by the British market were used by other debtors of America to obtain sterling which they would then sell across the exchange in order to meet their obligations to the United States Government. After the war the United Kingdom attempted to maintain its traditional trading system of free imports with the result that debtor countries throughout the world sold their goods on the British market and took the proceeds away over the exchange or in gold to meet their obligations elsewhere.

Under the stress of the present crisis his majesty's government have had to modify their system and to adopt tariffs; but the United Kingdom still imports from abroad goods to the value of several hundred million pounds in excess of what it exports and it would be necessary to consider what action could be taken to secure that the sterling proceeds of these imports were used more largely for the benefit of the British market.

SECTION III.

When President Hoover, in explaining his proposal for a suspension of intergovernmental payments for a year beginning July 1, 1931, stated that his object was "to relieve the pressure of the difficulties resulting from the fall in prices and the lack of confidence in economic and political stability and to assist in the reestablishment of confidence, thus forwarding political peace and economic stability in the world."

The action then taken gave a much needed respite, but it was not sufficient to restore confidence. Depression still continues and a resumption of war debts payments today would, for the reasons outlined above, involve economic reactions which must intensify the instability of the world.

Lausanne Agreement To Waiver War Debts.

If President Hoover's hopes are to be realized, definite remedial action requires to be taken to deal not merely with the British war debt to America, but with the whole system of intergovernmental obligations with which it is related.

22. The initiative in devising a settlement of reparations was taken by the creditor governments of Germany at Lausanne with the cognizance and approval of the United States Government. An arrangement was there signed under which Germany would be substantially relieved of a burden which had become intolerable and the participating creditors agreed provisionally among themselves to a waiver of their intergovernmental debts.

"It was in the nature of things inevitable that that settlement was provisional and that its completion was dependent upon a satisfactory settlement in respect of the debts for which the creditor powers themselves were liable to the United States Government.

23. The United States Government have frequently reiterated that they do not admit any connection between reparations and war debts, but this differentiation in the matter of intergovernmental obligations arising out of the war is not accepted by other countries which have creditor claims on the German government and whose ability to meet their own debt payments to the United States and to the United Kingdom is undoubtedly affected by the extent to which themselves are paid by Germany.

Whichever view is academically correct there is a de facto connection between these two sets of intergovernmental obligations and this was by implication admitted by the United States Government wher they proposed a moratorium on all intergovernmental obligations last year.

Moreover his majesty's government take it for granted that preferential treatment would never be claimed for war debts due to the United States as compared with those due to this country; and a situation in which this country was required to continue war debt payments while foregoing war debt payments due to it would be admitted at once to be unthinkable.

Thus if payment of the sums due in respect of the British war debt to the United States Government were to be resumed, his majesty's government would be obliged to reopen the question of payments from their own debtors—France, Italy, Portugal, Yugoslavia, Roumania, Greece, and also the British Dominions. The debtor countries would in turn have to demand payment by Germany of her obligations under the Young plan and the United Kingdom would have to do likewise.

Danger of Wrecking Good Done at Lausanne.

Without a readjustment of war debt obligations the Lausanne agreement could not be ratified; the question of reparations would remain unsettled; the improvement in confidence which followed the Lausanne agreements would be undone and fatal results might well be found to have accrued to the solution of many grave political as well as financial problems now under discussion.

24. His majesty's government understand that the Government of the United States have already appreciated the force of these considerations in the light of which they have recognized the desirability of a discussion of the major point stressed in a previous communication, namely, the revision of the existing debt obligations.

But his majesty's government wish to emphasize their conviction that their proposal for a suspension of the December payment, a proposal which would in no way affect any ultimate settlement, is necessary in order to create conditions favorable to a successful issue of subsequent conversations.

The difficulties of making transfer in present circumstances are so great and would involve such far-reaching reactions both financial and political, that the resulting doubts and anxieties in regard to the immediate situation would distract the attention of governments and peoples when the chief need was an objective and systematic approach to the problem to be solved.

25. Allusion has been made in the last paragraph to the difficulty of any attempt to meet the payment on December 15 by transfer across exchange. It has been the object of his majesty's government to take all possible steps to mitigate fluctuations in the relative value of sterling and gold currencies.

To this end, having in the first place repaid in full large temporary credits borrowed in connection with the financial crisis of the preceding year, they have acquired certain reserves in gold and in foreign exchange, but though these reserves are adequate for the purpose for which they were designed, they were not intended, and would not suffice to cover as well the payment of $95,500,000 due on December 15.

Sacrifice of Considerable Part of Gold Reserves.

The exchange difficulty would remain even if the device were adopted of payment in sterling to a blocked account, for the existence of a large sum awaiting transfer would affect the market almost as seriously as an actual purchase of exchange. The only remaining alternative would be payment in gold.

Such a method of payment would involve the sacrifice of a considerable part of the gold reserves of the Bank of England, which are widely regarded as no more than sufficient for the responsibilities of London as a financial center.

26. His Majesty's government trust that the full statement of their views which they have now made, will demonstrate clearly the ground upon which their request was based, namely their own profound conviction that a resumption of the war debt payments as they existed before the Hoover moratorium would inevitably deepen the depression in world trade and would lead to further falls in commodity prices with disastrous consequences from which no nation would be exempt.

They believe that a discussion between the United States Government and themselves upon these matters might bear fruitful issue for revival of world prosperity.

They are convinced that the prospects of success would be materially improved by the postponement of the December installment and they are prepared to consider with the Government of the United States of America any manner in which that postponement might be most conveniently arranged.

BRITISH NOTE ASKS FOR POSTPONEMENT

ogy such as is often employed in dealing with the debts. At times the note itself takes on a severe and classic literary style and there is even an echo of Biblical eloquence in the phrase:

"It will not profit a creditor country to collect a few million pounds or dollars if it thereby perpetuates a world disorder which, reacting on itself, involves losses of revenue many times greater."

The note also contains a shrewd reference to the interests of the agricultural elements of the country insofar as they are bound up with the problem of intergovernmental debts. After citing restriction of imports as the most probable effect of resumption of war-debt payments the note states:

"The United Kingdom has up to the present generally been the best customer of the United States, and the result of such restrictions would inevitably be to reduce especially the market in the United Kingdom for American farm products."

Other Points in Note.

Other points which are dramatically presented in favor of reconsideration are:

1. The loans raised in the early days of the war were not in the form of money, but in the form of goods.

2. The money thus borrowed was expended on destructive forces.

3. Payments in goods or services are in the long run the only way of settling international debts.

Refusal of the United States to accept payment in these forms has resulted in (a) fall in prices ruinous alike to debtor and creditor and (b) general lack of confidence in means of credit.

Statement of Mellon.

The note projects prominently into the foreground the statement made by Andrew W. Mellon when he was Secretary of the Treasury in which he deprecated the settlement of the intergovernmental debts on any basis oppressive or retardatory to the debtor nations.

The note added:

"The resumption of debt payments in present circumstances appears altogether inconsistent with the principles here laid down."

Statistical arguments play a large and eloquent part in the development of the second part of the note. This is more particularly confined to an analysis of the real costs of the war debt to the taxpayers of Great Britain and the United States.

Since the war Great Britain has paid the United States more than $3,000,000,000 of her original $12,000,000,000 borrowed here during the war period. The British share of the war debt is only 40 per cent, but the payments already made by all the countries to the United States on account of war debts show that England has paid 80 per cent of all moneys paid in.

At the same time the United States is reminded of the loans which England made to her allies during the war. This sum was only slightly inferior to the American loans, $7,800,000,000 in all.

CONGRESS LEADERS UNSHAKEN BY NOTE

Republicans and Democrats Alike Are Opposed to Delay or Revision.

(Associated Press.)

Great Britain's renewed request for a further moratorium on her war debt and her forecast of dire economic and political consequences if her petition is denied apparently made little impression last night on Congress, which has final say on the subject.

Republican and Democratic leaders alike clung to their previous positions against deferment of the December 15 installments.

They also predicted defeat for any proposal to create a debt commission to study individual petitions from the debtor nations. In its first note to Great Britain, the State Department let it be known that President Hoover would recommend to Congress next week that such an agency be established.

Commenting on the British reply last night, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, said: "I don't think there is any chance for postponement, cancellation, reduction, revision or evasion of the December payments or for revival of the debt funding commission."

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, just back from a conference with President-elect Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., said Democrats generally were opposed to postponement of this month's payments and a definite policy would be formulated when President Hoover's recommendations are received.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, said: "I don't believe any statement as to financial difficulties abroad will alter in the slightest degree the fixed opinion of the House and Senate."

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, said his position was in no way changed by the latest British note.

Chairman Collier, of the House ways and means committee, said: "I have said and I repeat that I do not favor an extension of the moratorium. Any suspension of payments due us on December 15 would only make it more difficult to collect when the time came for the subsequent payment."

TRUSTEES BLOCKING AUSTRIAN PAYMENT

Mills Asserts $287,556 Due U. S. New Year's Will Be Held Back.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mills yesterday announced that payments on the Austrian debt due the United States on January 1, amounting to $287,556, will be postponed because the trustees of the Austrian guaranteed loan oppose the payment.

The funding agreement between the United States and Austria provides "the obligation of Austria to pay the annuities during the years 1929 to 1943 will, in the case of each annuity, not arise if the trustees of the reconstruction loan (to Austria) of 1923, prior to the preceding December 1, have raised objection to the payment of the annuity in question on the due date."

The secretary of the trustees telegraphed the Austrian finance minister at Vienna, saying "the trustees of the Austrian guaranteed loan 1923-1943 acting in virtue of the right conferred upon them in agreements concluded between the Austrian government and international relief bonds committee dated June 15, 1928, on the one hand and the United States of America dated May 8, 1930, on the other hand have the honor to inform your excellency that they oppose payment of all annuities contemplated in the agreements payable the first of January, 1933.

"The trustees have taken this measure in hope that it will facilitate in the near future the resumption of the transfer of the service of the guaranteed loan."

BRITAIN'S APPEAL.

The note from the British government setting forth reasons for requesting reconsideration of the war debt and suspension of the December payment is conspicuously silent on two points which might have been discussed with good effect.

No mention is made of any desire or hope of relieving world conditions by reduction of the tremendous cost of armaments, which vastly exceeds the sums required for debt payments. No offer is made of any concession, commercial or otherwise, in exchange for American debt concessions.

The note eloquently describes the chaotic conditions resulting from the destruction of wealth in the world war. It movingly pictures the derangement of European national finances, commerce, and domestic economies.

Somewhere, it seems, the note should have emphasized the folly of squandering billions in armaments by the debtors at a time when they are suffering from the consequences of war. The appeal for debt reduction is coincident with the breakdown of the Geneva disarmament conference.

To the practical American mind it is preposterous that governments should overtax their peoples to pile up armaments while refusing to make any agreement whatever for mutual reduction of these expenditures.

Granting all that has been so clearly stated by the British government concerning chaotic commercial and financial conditions, it may strike Congress and the American people that the note constitutes a powerful argument in behalf of immediate action for the relief of the world by throwing off armaments that are costing nearly ten times more than the war debt payments.

It may be that the British government expects to offer some trade or other concessions at the proposed world economic conference which would persuade the United States to scale the debts downward. But no hint is given of such an intention. Complaint is made of American tariff barriers, but no suggestion is made which might be construed as willingness to grant tariff favors in exchange for debt favors.

The reasons given for appealing for suspension of the December payment are that the proposed debt conference would meet in a more confident frame of mind if the suspension were granted; that transfers from one country to another are extremely difficult and burdensome, and especially so when more pounds sterling would be required to make up the gold payment of $95,000,000; and that the transfer of gold from London would impair the strength of London as a financial center.

Most of the note deals with the plea for debt revision. The briefer references to suspension of next month's payment contain nothing that had not already been brought out. Unless the plea for a debt revision conference should persuade Congress that such a step is necessary, it does not seem likely that the reasons advanced for suspension of the December payment will have much weight.

The several notes from the debtor governments have established a situation in which Congress can not grant suspension of the December payments without agreeing to consider revision of all the war debts; and cancellation altogether is contemplated by the debtor governments, once the question is opened. The notes are meaningless unless their purpose is cancellation of the debts.

The suggestion is made that American commerce would be benefited many times over by cancellation of the debts, and with this suggestion is coupled the intimation that failure to cancel will result in damage to American commerce. This presentation, made unofficially heretofore, has not moved Congress, which has insisted that cancellation would merely shift a heavy burden from foreign to American shoulders. Whether the dire predictions of the British note will change the attitude of Congress remains to be seen. It is obvious, however, that failure to offer any co-operation in the direction of world relief from excessive cost of armaments will cause adverse comment in this country.

PRACTICAL FARM RELIEF.

Farm relief looms up as the most formidable hurdle that Congress must clear either at the short session or during an extra session after March 4. Yet no reasonable program has been offered by any one of the farm organizations or by either political party. Every one is agreed that the plight of the farmer is desperate and that something must be done to improve his status before the return of prosperity can be expected. But most of the discussion on this issue reverts back to the quack remedies that have already been examined and found wanting.

Two general approaches to farm relief are being made on Capitol Hill. One is by way of a domestic allotment plan of some kind, and the other is by way of the so-called "three-way" plan which would authorize the Farm Board to apply the export debenture, the equalization fee or the allotment plan to any crop at its own discretion. Since the farm organizations are unable to agree upon a remedy, it is said, Congress should again pass the buck to the Farm Board. Nearly four years ago Congress threw the entire farm relief dilemma upon this board with a broad grant of authority, and then severely criticized that body because its stabilization efforts failed to provide anything more than temporary relief. Another movement to force the Farm Board to experiment with impractical remedies would be a grave disappointment for the entire country.

In the face of this situation, thinking farmers and business men, who are also vitally interested in agricultural relief, are struggling to work out some practical plan that will afford relief without leaving fresh disaster in its wake. Thomas D. Campbell, who is the world's foremost wheat producer, has suggested a plan through the columns of The Post. Mr. Campbell is aware of the dangers inherent in the debenture, the equalization fee and the allotment schemes. With the aid of distinguished economists he has worked out a proposed substitute designed to avoid stimulating production, to prevent a drain upon the Treasury, and to keep agriculture free from the toils of bureaucracy.

Mr. Campbell's plan aims at making the tariff on farm crops effective in the simplest way possible. There can be no controversy over this objective. American farmers can not continue producing in competition with Canada, Argentina and Australia without perpetuating their present hopeless condition. France, Germany, Italy and Great Britain have restricted their markets for farm products by paying huge bounties or maintaining exorbitant tariffs that bring unproductive land into cultivation. Congress will find it necessary to take some steps to make the American tariff effective on that portion of staple crops that are consumed in the domestic market. The question at issue is how it shall be done.

The ascertainment of domestic prices, based on world prices plus tariff duties and transportation charges, may be preferable to any attempt on the part of the Government to limit the amount of land a farmer might plant or the amount of produce he might sell. The division of each crop into domestic and foreign quotas, so that each time the farmer increases production he penalizes himself by cutting down the portion of his crop on which tariff benefits would be available, is a long step in advance of the export debenture scheme, which would stimulate production as a straight bounty.

Mr. Campbell's plan must, of course, be carefully scrutinized by experts and practical administrators.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Few administrators have more diversified duties than those devolving upon the Governor of the Panama Canal. He is the executive head of the various activities in the Canal Zone, governing not only the ramified work of maintaining the canal, directing shipping and providing all the auxiliary enterprises that are necessary in connection with traffic and the operating force, including a railroad and steamship service, but he is also in charge of government, educational facilities, postal and quarantine service, police, customs and fire departments required by a population of more than 40,000.

The report of Gov. Burgess, covering the operation of the canal for the last fiscal year, has just been filed with the Secretary of War. The number of ships passing through the canal during the year was 4,979, a decrease of 1,118 from the previous year and 1,806 from 1930. The average transit for the year was over thirteen ships a day. The total yearly receipts from tolls amounted to $20,707,855. This is a decrease from the previous year of about $4,000,000. Cargo tonnage passing through the canal amounted to 19,807,000 tons, the net tonnage of transiting vessels being 23,625 tons.

The net income from tolls and other canal revenue for the last fiscal year amounted to $11,194,800, or $3,402,426 below similar income for the year before, and $6,780,043 below 1928, in which year the peak income from canal operation was collected. The operation of all business under the Panama Canal was conducted with a resulting net profit of $557,095. The total capital investment in the canal, including compound interest on the construction funds, is $533,106,009. The Panama Railroad made a net profit for the year of $725,000.

Gov. Burgess repeats recommendations against any reduction of canal tolls, believing them to be equitable at present levels, considering increased costs required because of replacements and betterments. Foreign vessels pay 53 per cent of the tolls, and it is suggested that decreased rates to American shipping would work injustice to competing railroads in the United States.

CHRISTMAS MAIL.

Postmaster Mooney asks The Post to urge all Washingtonians to mail Christmas packages early. In spite of an extra staff at the holidays it is a difficult task to dispatch the mails that pile up. The postoffice must handle incoming packages as well, and of course the delays in each city pile up work in the others.

Christmas giving can be made pleasant instead of burdensome by taking prompt action in shopping and mailing. Shopping should be done early in the day if possible, because of the rush in later hours. Everybody is benefited, including the shopper, when shopping and mailing are attended to well before the holiday rush.

RAILROAD COORDINATION.

The appointment of a Washington man, Harry Guy Taylor, as commissioner of Western railroads is a new departure in the transportation industry. For several months more than thirty roads have been considering the advisability of the move and the qualifications of various candidates for such a post. Finally a committee of executives headed by President C. R. Gray, of the Union Pacific, decided that Mr. Taylor's experience in practical railroad work and with organizations of railway officials, and his service here as manager of public relations for the American Railway Association rendered him particularly well qualified for the position.

The preliminary discussions of this new office developed some erroneous impressions regarding its scope and character. The suggestion that the commissioner was to be a czar or umpire with absolute authority to make final and binding decisions was quite unwarranted. It is pointed out that no railroad management can legally or morally divest itself of ultimate decision and freedom of action, and no such step was contemplated in the creation of the new office. But the roads realize the necessity of coordination and cooperation in many matters and it is believed that much good will be accomplished by the voluntary acceptance of Mr. Taylor's rulings.

His decisions will relate chiefly to matters of rates and train schedules. Important questions in dispute will be laid before him for independent and equitable adjustment. Officials feel that the new commissioner will be able to do much to eliminate harmful competition, particularly in passenger traffic, and reduce the loss from operation in this branch of the service. Under the agreement reached by the interested roads his advice and decisions as a mediator or conciliator are expected to be effective without his position being invested with dictatorial powers.

The new commissioner's term of office begins December 15 and it is expected that Mr. Taylor will establish headquarters in Chicago. In connection with his post he will assume the chairmanship of the Western Association of Railway Executives. Following early experience in the newspaper business in Nebraska and Kansas Mr. Taylor went to the Nebraska legislature, and later was a member of the State Railway Commission. He became president of the National Association of Railway and Utilities Commissioners, was chairman of the Central Western Shippers Advisory Board, and five years ago came to Washington with the American Railway Association. That he is not actively connected with any of the roads for which he will now act as mediator is looked upon as strengthening him in the position of impartial arbiter in many important questions for the western lines.

NO FREE MEALS

From the Boston Transcript.

Americans have a right of free assembly, but this does not include free meals. That fact is important, and the Federal Government will need to keep it very clearly in mind when dealing with "hunger marches" to Washington. Already the national authorities have done well to serve definite notice that the District of Columbia has no means to supply board and lodging to large groups of visitors unable to care for themselves, and does not propose to permit such assemblies at the Capital by groups seeking maintenance there which they are warned in advance they can not have.

Especially does the warning apply to the various small bodies now converging on Washington from cities in the East and Middle West under the outward guise of unemployed workers plain and simple, but known to be chiefly of communistic purpose within. It is the particular intent of these people to embarrass the Federal Government, if they can, by so confusing the American right of free assembly and petition with an un-American demand for free maintenance that, in rejecting the specious request, our authorities will appear unmindful of the true and normal rights of citizens. The treachery of such procedure must be evident, and the irony is only the sharper when one remembers that the basic purpose of communism seeks the overthrow of the very government to whose sense of mercy and of national honor they pretend to make their appeal.

Initiatives of this sort will have to be sternly put down. And even in cases which do not include subversive intent, the fact must be made wholly clear and certain that delegations of any sort, planning to visit the Capital without any prearranged means of support, can not be received there.

When in Washington the President-elect disclaimed parental responsibility for the debt baby, but what a flock of foundlings he has adopted at Warm Springs!

Well-fed hunger marchers, enjoying motor rides to the Capital, know perfectly well they will neither get $50 cash nor influence legislation, so keep in mind their objective.

The presidential training camp in Georgia, experiencing all the thrills of a Little Capital, is even to be visited by 2,000 marchers, hungry for "money based on human effort."

Every sixteen minutes some one in the United States is killed by an automobile, every day 100 are injured, and the annual property loss from motor accidents is $3,000,000,000. What are we going to do about it except pay the bill?

Speaking of that boasted German efficiency, we don't have as many elections as the Reich, and can't count the votes as fast, but when we have one it decides something.

By the time hard liquor returns probably those roll-proof stabilizers will be perfected so that one can be carried in the pocket.

The care with which Communist organizations in New York handpicked their hunger marchers and provided them with food, warm clothing and motor transportation, is quite illuminating—and with Red light.

It seems that Col. Lindbergh isn't going to have that fleet of transatlantic air clippers ready for regular service for two years. Can you wait?

The beautiful vision of the lame ducks, in a short session, completing the imposing structure designed to surmount the Chicago platform, is gradually fading from view.

The dirt farmers marching on Washington from the big, open spaces will arrive in good time to veto any agreements made by the professional heads of farm organizations.

Just as we approach the era of the new deal a mechanical dealer is invented that may spoil plans by adding to unemployment.

The move to make Marine corpses of 1,700 Devil Dogs opens the grave question as to whether this is not running economy into the ground.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE COMEDIAN.

He set them all to laughing with his nonsense and his fun
And all of them were sorry when his foolishness was done.
For troubles that had vanished when the jester took the floor
As soon as he departed came back to mind once more.

'Tis strange what changes happen in the presence of a clown,
The heart that's sad and lonely puts all its burdens down.
The man with doubt affrighted soon forgets to be afraid
And grief and heartache vanish when a comic's on parade.

I watched him making merry. For an hour or two I'll swear
The men and women round him had forgotten every care.
The eyes of all were twinkling with the glistening light of mirth
And one swift gale of laughter swept all sorrows from the earth.

But when the jester left us and the merriment was o'er
We picked our burdens up again and murmured as before;
And some remembered losses and some their griefs retold
And some went back to sighing over hurts and heartaches old.

He Is a Poor Guide Who Leads His Followers on a Path to Nowhere

By ROBERT QUILLEN

IN regions remote from civilization, where sins are rustic and few, protests against the established order are limited to getting drunk and "disturbing public worship." Young rebels make a show of their defiance by surrounding a church at night and firing their pistols into the air.

The protest of more sophisticated youth is expressed less noisily, but the reason for it and the point of attack are similar.

The young are idealists. Knowing little of the difficulties that interfere, they require perfection. And as they discover the world's imperfections they become temporary cynics.

Adults are enemies who interfere and thwart. The world's institutions are the work and property of adults. Therefore the institutions are enemy institutions to be scorned and condemned.

The most sacred of these adult institutions is religion. It follows, then, that rebel youth can make its protest most alarming and most spectacular by striking at this very heart and citadel of adult rule.

In other lands students riot to express their scorn of the established order. In America they become Socialists and assure one another that God is a myth.

During the age of protest, youngsters rejoice in literature that condemns the world. Brann's Iconoclast was almost a college text book. Now Mencken is the campus prophet. And in most of our larger schools there are "liberal" professors who win youth's admiration by thumbing their noses at God.

The sad part of it is that so many young people do little or no thinking after they finish school and so never purge their minds of rebel agnosticism. They solve the greatest of problems by refusing to think about it.

Left to his own devices, the intelligent youth doubtless would observe the mathematical perfection of nature and conclude that a supreme and omniscient intelligence planned it. Since natural laws still function, he would conclude that the power behind them still reigns. And since nothing can be destroyed, however much its form is changed, he would assume that the mysterious something called life is somehow and somewhere everlasting.

Belief in God has made life better for millions. Some can achieve it by means of logic. Others can learn only from teachers, and these owe much of life's bitterness to instructors who taught them only to doubt.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Political Economy.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

We were remiss at the passing of Robert S. Brookings did we not relate to the present plight of the United States Treasury the idea Mr. Brookings had that such misfortunes might be avoided.

In a word, this interesting American business man, who gave most of his time and almost all of his millions to education, sought to give government the benefit of the science known as political economy. He had this in mind when he established the Brookings Institution at Washington. Mr. Brookings knew, as we all should know, that government in the United States is almost never with benefit of either political science or political economy. Political science is, with us, largely a tradition. It is not practiced either by the Nation or any of the States outside of Massachusetts, New York and Wisconsin.

Think of America.

Caledonia (Minn.) Journal.

Mr. Roosevelt will have the world's toughest job, which will prove all too big, unless he has the support not only of those who voted for Roosevelt, but also those who crossed their ballot for Hoover. Those who "switched to Roosevelt" owe the President-elect every ounce of loyalty and support they can muster. This vast number who deserted the Republican party should realize that this new leader is but human and can not by the spoken word make the storm subside or the sun break through the clouds. But he is deserving of an opportunity to try to make good. It is an American practice to set up a hero one day and stone him the next. However, the situation demands that the American people forget politics for the present and think of America. Are we big enough?

Repeal Delay Foreseen.

Boston Transcript.

Thirsty optimists who are confident that the eighteenth amendment will be repealed or modified almost at once may find a hint in the situation of the lame duck amendment. Here is a noncontroversial measure whose adoption is universally desired. It needs only to be ratified by 36 Legislatures to become effective, and they are proceeding with the process of approval in record time. Nevertheless, it must travel its rosy path almost two years before it can become part of the Constitution. That affecting the eighteenth amendment not only is essentially controversial, but it must be acted upon by special conventions, if the platforms of both parties are to be observed. These can not be set up in a jiffy.

Bad Approach.

New York Herald Tribune.

Because we have the greatest sympathy with the financial problems of Great Britain we think it important to point out that the appeals thus far made in her behalf in respect to the debts too often misconceive totally the attitude of this country. We happen to disagree flatly with the extreme position taken by Congress against any reconsideration. But we are bound to say that its stand is the almost inevitable consequence of the type of appeal thus far made by most of our debtors abroad. Until the character of these appeals alters it is hopeless to expect Congress to change its mind.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Old "Revenooer" Says Beer Legislation Will End Demand for Repeal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sale of beer will be permitted under a bill passed by Congress at some future time. Every temperance advocate should, for the good of the country, favor and vote for it when it comes up. It is absolutely the only way whereby the repeal of the eighteenth amendment may be prevented. The distillers and those interested in the selling of whisky, brandy, &c., are a very small minority of the American people and, from a temperance point of view, they haven't a leg to stand on. There is no such thing as temperance where the sale of distilled spirits is concerned.

The only basis for determining what is intoxicating is the alcoholic contents of a beverage by volume, and its effects on an average person.

One-half pint of whisky, gin, brandy or other distilled spirits, with an alcoholic content of 90 or 100 per cent, will make any one drunk, except an old soak. The same person could drink five or six times that amount of 3½ per cent beer and not be intoxicated. He could drink a pint or a pint and a half of wine without showing it.

The difference is the strength of the alcohol in the beverage by volume, and the length of time it takes the system to rid itself of the alcohol. In the case of beer, in the normal person, it acts directly upon the kidneys, and soon passes away. In the case of wine, the kidneys are not so directly involved, and the effect lasts longer. In the case of distilled spirits the entire system is, to a certain extent, paralyzed and it takes several hours for the effect to pass off.

To an old "revenooer" who spent more than 30 years in the Government service, most of which time was in dealing with distilleries, breweries, wholesale and retail liquor dealers under the old law, it was at the time, and is now, my opinion that the fatal mistake was made when the fanatics in Congress passed the Volstead act limiting the alcoholic strength of a beverage to half of 1 per cent. They could not have done worse if they had eliminated the alcohol entirely, or substituted soda pop. At least 75 per cent of the people were used to drinking beer, and a possible 25 per cent used distilled spirits and wine. To tell these 100,000,000 people that they could only drink slop in the future was enough to disrupt the entire scheme.

The general idea at the time the eighteenth amendment was passed was that it would do away with saloons and the sale of distilled liquors, but Congress went the full length when the Volstead act was passed.

To get back to a temperance basis it will be necessary to amend the Volstead act and permit the sale of beer and light wines under a proper tax and regulations. Beer should be limited to an alcoholic strength, by volume, of 3½ per cent, and wine to 12 per cent. When this is done the demand for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment will of itself gradually disappear because the general public has made no demand, and does not desire the return of distilled spirits, which would bring back the saloons, and nobody wants the saloon and its evils back. Bishop Brent's Moro School, Wrecked by Typhoon, to Be Restored.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last spring the typhoon which swept the Philippines caused property damage amounting to millions of dollars and the death of over 200 persons. In the vicinity of Jolo the effects were especially disastrous, and among the serious losses was the wrecking of the Moro Agricultural and Industrial School, founded by the late Bishop Brent. The school stood as a memorial to Bishop Brent, as the famous Philippine leper colony stands in memory of his intimate friend, Gen. Leonard Wood.

Before the typhoon there were over 100 acres of highly developed land in the school grounds, frequently spoken of as the finest in the Far East. A coconut grove of more than 3,000 bearing trees had but 20 left after the typhoon, while the coffee trees, pineapple plants and orchards of other fruit trees were ruined. The buildings were almost completely demolished, while the water pipe line was broken at virtually every joint and the entire place wrecked beyond recognition.

With the help of the students who volunteered to work on the temporary buildings, Mr. Meyette, the headmaster, was able to open the school on schedule time. With the assistance of the Red Cross and Governor General Roosevelt, Mr. Meyette was able to carry on in the midst of the desolation. Word was later received from the trustees of the Moro Educational Foundation in New York that a unanimous vote on the question assured the rebuilding of the institution. It is gratifying to learn that despite the many calls on the public at this time, funds have been secured to restore the school, which has done so much for Moro boys.

Envies Senator Borah for His Opportunity to Swat the Beer Saloon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I envy Senator Borah the opportunity he will have in this session of Congress to expose and denounce the spurious and malign economies and the godless and wanton statesmanship that are to champion the return of beer as a means of restoring prosperity and replenishing the needy coffers of the national treasury. His eloquence and logic will deliver herculean blows against such palpable and wicked sophistry to the great delight of citizens who have painful memory of the 275,000 saloons that once ran riot in our land and, like an insatiable leech, went on sucking the lifeblood out of all legitimate business. Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT will make her debut as an orchestra leader in Town Hall on Tuesday, December 6. The occasion for Mrs. Roosevelt's musical direction will be one of the weekly community "sings," presented under the auspices of the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, where former Gov. Alfred E. Smith made such a hit as a singer last Tuesday.

The program will be broadcast over WRC at 5:30 p. m. Mrs. Roosevelt will lead the band in the famous song, "Happy Days Are Here Again."

THAT the little 250-watt "Pillar of Fire" religious station, WAWZ, at Zarephath, N. J., has reaped a fortune for its operators was charged by Judge Ira E. Robinson, former commissioner, before the Federal Radio Commission.

"The legal title of the 'Pillar of Fire' station is in a family by the name of White," Judge Robinson continued, "and the broadcasting is of a promotional character in their interests. The Radio Commission has no right to allocate valuable facilities which belong to all the people to any group for use as a mouthpiece. No religious organization should be allowed to operate a station for its special benefit or to earn a large amount of money."

Judge Robinson declared the operators of the station have accumulated $750,000. He represented Station WORC-WEPC, Worcester, Mass., which desires to enlarge its facilities by deleting the "Pillar of Fire" and three other stations sharing the same frequency. Paul D. P. Spearman, acting for the stations, opposed the move.

A SERIES of special broadcasts covering the activities of the "lame duck" session of Congress, which will convene at noon on Monday, has been arranged.

Frederic William Wile, equipped with a lapel microphone, will informally interview a number of the national legislators on the way to their seats, to be followed by a reading of President Hoover's message to Congress.

On Tuesday, a daily five-minute program entitled "What Congress Did Today," will be inaugurated by Edwin C. Hill. These bulletin resumes of daily developments in the Senate and House will be broadcast over WJSV from 6:15 to 6:20 p. m. Ed Hill will do the broadcasts for a week, when he will be replaced by Wile, who will continue them during the session.

This will be Army and Navy night for the All-America Football Show (WJSV, 9 o'clock). Maj. Ralph Sasse and Edgar "Rip" Miller will be interviewed by Christy Walsh. A male chorus and Freddie Rich's band will offer songs of West Point and Annapolis.

F. P. GUTHRIE, of the Radio Corporation, spent the better part of yesterday morning figuring on how to put up a Western Union sign on the Radio Corporation offices in Connecticut avenue. Hereafter the Western Union will accept radiograms and the R. C. A. will take Western Union telegrams.

Walter Connolly, well-known Broadway actor, now appearing in "The Late Christopher Bean," will come to radio to portray Charlie Chan, famous Chinese detective of fiction, whose exploits will be unfolded over the WJZ network, beginning at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Duke Ellington and his orchestra will make three consecutive appearances on WMAL, beginning tonight.

Ellington's engagement at the Howard Theater will be his last regular appearance in this country before he sails for a season in Paris.

THE N. B. C. didn't come through with Levitzki, the pianist, over WRC, at 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday night, as announced. No explanation was given as to why the engagement was canceled.

WOL will broadcast the following program during the Symphonic Hour at 8 o'clock tonight:

"Danse Macabre," Saint-Saens; "Symphony, No. 5," from "The New World," Dvorak, and "March Slav," Tschaikowsky.

Destruction of nine Lutheran churches in the Finnish provinces of Soviet Russia will be dramatized during the "March of Time" over WJSV at 8:30 o'clock. War debts will form the background for another news re-enactment.

GOOD news for the invalids! Beginning at 11:30 o'clock on Thursday morning, December 8, the famous Shut-in Hour will be resumed by the United States Marine Band over WRC. This is in compliance with numerous requests received from listeners all over the country.

The Shut-in Hour is the idea of Capt. Taylor Branson, who began it several years ago as a contribution to those not fortunate enough to be able to attend concerts in person. Members of the band entered into it wholeheartedly; also Arthur Godfrey who, if the shut-ins had anything to say about it, would have got the announcers' gold medal a long time ago.

ADA LILLIAN BUSH, business analyst and writer on women's problems, will speak over WMAL at 11 o'clock this morning on "The Wise Spending Program." The series "Among the Women of Washington" is sponsored by the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

For the 100th anniversary performance of the first nighter, "One Time in Old Mexico," a romance of native Mexican life written especially for the occasion, will be presented over the WJZ network at 9 o'clock tonight.

Baltimore, Md., has just applied for a construction permit to install a police radio system.

"MY Uncle Julius was peculiar. He was a hermit and lived by himself in a cabin in a lonely wood. He was always borrowing money from my Uncle Horace. Uncle Horace used to say Uncle Julius wanted nothing but to be left a loan."—Ed Wynn.

75 Women Have Signed For Peace Study Class

Seventy-five women have made preregistration for the peace study class which is to be held all day today at the Hotel Washington under the auspices of the woman's council of the Washington Federation of Churches.

The topics to be discussed during the sessions will be "The Causes of War," "Building Up Peace Machinery," and "The Attitude of Church Women Toward Peace." Mrs. Frank E. Edgington will be the leader of the study.

Russia and Soviet Listed As Lecturer's Subject

Dr. Esther Caulkin Brunauer will speak on "Czarist Russia, and How the Soviet Regime Came About," at a meeting of the committee of international cooperation to prevent war of the District League of Women Voters tonight at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. William C. Johnstone, 912 Nineteenth street northwest.

Healer Is Convicted On No-License Charge

Eugene Harvey, 54-year-old colored "doctor," was found guilty in Police Court yesterday of practising a healing art without a license. Harvey is alleged to have given three colored women various concoctions that were advertised to cure them of their ailments. When the cure failed, the women complained to police. Sentence will be pronounced next week.

Colombia Boat Sale Off After Protest by Peru

Madrid, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Minister of Marine Giral announced tonight that a contract to sell the gunboat Dato to Colombia had been nullified.

He said Peru protested against the sale in view of the conflict between the two countries over the town of Leticia.

SIX PLAYERS BRIDGE LAURELS

Culbertson Team Trails Only One Point Zedtwitz Foursome.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Four contract masters, who are veterans in the bridge wars, but who never had played together before, sprang an upset today to win the national team championship, a feature event of the American Bridge League's sixth annual tournament.

The team was composed of Waldemar von Zedtwitz, president of the league; George Reith and S. Gaston Churchill, all of New York, and B. Jay Becker, of Philadelphia, representing the Knickerbocker Whist Club. They won 50 of the 80 matches in the three-session event.

Ely Culbertson's four, which had been in the lead and which many observers favored to win, was a close second, just one point behind. It was composed of Culbertson, Oswald Jacoby, Theodore A. Lightner and Michael T. Gottlieb, all of New York. Hugh Jackson substituted for Culbertson in the first session Tuesday.

Half Point Behind.

The team of David Burnstine, Howard Schenken, Richard Frey and Charles Lochridge, which was runner-up in the recent Vanderbilt Cup tournament, placed third with 46 points.

Half a point behind were P. Hal Sims, Willard S. Karn, Sherman Stearns and H. Huber Boscowitz. Sims and Karn, with Von Zedtwitz and Harold S. Vanderbilt as their teammates, defeated Burnstine's quartet for the Vanderbilt Cup.

The defending champions in today's play—Commander Winfield Liggett, jr., Mrs. Norman N. Newman, George Unger and Mrs. Elizabeth B. Banfield, finished sixth with 43½ points.

One point ahead of them were H. P. Jeeger and Edward C. Wolfe, of Cleveland, and W. J. Pray and J. Cain, of Indianapolis.

Bridge Club Trophy.

The winners will receive the silver trophy presented by the Auction Bridge Club of Chicago.

A couple of dark horses nosed past P. Hal Sims and Willard S. Karn tonight after the two qualifying rounds of the national contract pair championship.

Leo Bachrach and L. J. Schwarz, youthful New Yorkers who never have figured in the headlines, bowled over their second-session opponents and led the field with 224½ points.

Sims and Karn, the defending champions, were second with 221 points. Third with 214 points came Maurice Maschke, of Cleveland, and Samuel Rockwell, also of Cleveland.

Those three pairs were among the twelve section leaders in the second round. Others included P. B. Speakman and Miss Florence J. Stratford, of Cleveland; Miss B. W. Sherman and Mrs. L. Hewburgh, of Chicago; Capt. Fred G. French and Charles Goren, of Philadelphia; E. M. Baker and O. S. Emrich, of Cleveland, and Abner Kalisch, of Newark, and Gordon M. Gibbs, of Bloomfield, N. J.

Some Interesting Bidding.

The following hand which was dealt in the pair tournament provided some interesting bidding:

NORTH.
S—9 7 4 2
H—A 10 9 6 5 2
D—Q 9 2
C—Blank

WEST.	EAST.
S—J 5 3	S—10 8
H—7 3	H—J
D—A 10 6 3	D—J 8 5 4
C—A 10 9 4	C—Q J 8 7 6 5

SOUTH.
S—A K Q 6
D—K 7
C—K 3 2

North and South were vulnerable, East and West were not vulnerable, and South dealt.

The following was the bidding of S. A. Ryan and A. G. Schuman, of Cleveland, North and South, and W. B. Hill, jr., and Mrs. J. Schwan, of New York, East and West:

South opened with a spade and West put in a psychic no trump. North said two hearts, East passed, South bid three hearts, West passed, and North then cleverly bid four clubs, although blank in the suit. By that maneuver he permitted his partner to indicate more exactly just what he held in spades and hearts.

After East's pass, South bid four spades, showing his tops in the suit. North then bid six hearts with confidence.

Volunteer Drivers Called For in Red Cross Work

A special meeting for volunteer drivers for the motor corps of the District Red Cross Chapter was made yesterday to meet increased demands for taking hospitalized veterans to theaters and in the collection of garments for the city's unemployed.

The greatest need of the corps is on Wednesdays of each week, when 90 veterans are brought from St. Elizabeths Hospital to a downtown motion picture theater.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

IF December 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:20 a. m. to 11:45 a. m., from 4:30 p. m. to 6 p. m., and from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and from 3 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Do not attempt to "put anything over" on this December 2, either in a business or social way. Lay your cards on the table and be direct and frank and you will profit accordingly. It would seem inadvisable to enter into any long-term arrangements of any sort. Influences are of an uncertain kind and, though you may feel sure of your stand now, you may find yourself completely reversing it on the morrow.

Children born on this December 2 will be quiet and unassuming and most dependable. They will be very prompt in carrying out their duties both at home and at school. They will be neat and orderly. An inclination toward selfishness will be apparent, but this can be easily corrected. They will prefer to play indoors. Fond of reading and will show a flare for music and painting.

Born on December 2, you are probably a great dreamer. You fail in that group of people who are "just about to arrive." For some reason unknown to yourself you never seem to get any place; but you always have some plan or scheme "up your sleeve" that is going to turn the trick and make a great financial success out of you. You are not lazy, but you do not have within you the drive that makes a man get out on his own and make a success. You prefer to work for somebody else. Physically you are very active, and the chances are you have great physical strength.

As an employe you can be greatly trusted and your employer and those with whom you come in contact have great confidence in you. You are a very likable person; you are, perhaps, too modest and retiring, but you manage to fit yourself comfortably into almost any group you find yourself with. The women born on this date, December 2, make ideal wives and mothers. Their love is lasting and can endure anything except deceitfulness. Once deceived, their love is extinguished and they are through once and for all.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

HAVE you noticed them; the intriguing, charming, romantic pin curls that all fashionable heads seem to be wearing? They're the modernized version of the old-fashioned paper curls. Perhaps mother remembers.

Styles invariably move in cycles. The very newest one is the Edourdian or Victorian influence. We are borrowing a page from the old family album, a picture of grandma with her leg-o'-mutton sleeves, wide-shouldered little jackets, tiny sailor hat, and best of all, those romantic tricky little paper curls.

Heads Are Curly.

Heads aren't wavy any more. They're curly. The new, modern version is intriguing and different. Best of all, it's becoming to every one. Women are primping. And proud of it. Depression may have hit their homes, but the clever housewives are not allowing their hair to become depressed, too. In fact, the lovilier they look, the higher they hold their heads, and the more joyful the general atmosphere of their home becomes. It's a great tonic!

Even the busy office worker who sticks to a very simple daytime haircomb, emerges triumphantly transformed for the evening. Beauty goes to her head whenever she goes to places. If she hasn't time to have her hair specially set and arranged in these curls and ringlets, that doesn't bother her pretty head one bit. For she can easily purchase a little "extra piece" of curls or ringlets and pin into place over her own hair. That, of course, is for those special occasions when the magic touch of glamour is so important. When you know that you look so different and so lovely, perhaps it will make your own heart beat faster. Perhaps another's.

"Permanented."

It isn't a difficult matter to have these ringlets in place at all times. For you can have the ends of your hair permanently waved, or rather permanently "ringletted" and be beautiful ever after.

Or, if you don't mind fussing you can put the little curls up with hairpins or little tissue papers. Of course, it's best to have the expert touch of an expert for important occasions at least.

I was in St. Louis recently, lecturing in one of the leading department stores in that city. One look at the sculptured heads of the wax figures on display in their Beauty Salon, another glance at the ringletted living models and I knew why we were borrowing from Victoria's fashions. That magic touch just makes queens of us all. Try it yourself for your next "special engagement" and see if you don't feel that way.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Three ways that discreet decolletes are whispered this winter! (Selected on Fifth Avenue.)

SHE writes that her mother does not allow her to use rouge, and that "sometimes she rubs her face so hard to put some color into it that it pains for days afterward!"

Really, isn't that sad? What mother could let her daughter ruin her skin, rupture the little blood vessels that never heal, tear down the ligaments of the face, distort the muscles, all for a prejudice! Of course, the child does not know that she is doing all this to herself.

The correct use of rouge is in quite good taste, as unnoticeable as natural color, and far, far better than the devices with which this daughter obtains the coloring she feels that she simply must have.

And what about the psychological effect upon her—the two effects, rather? The one of being so different from others that it increases the natural awkwardness of adolescence and further removes her from the poise and assurance of an intelligent woman, the other of sneaking! She borrowa a bit of rouge from her schoolmates whenever she can! Can't this mother realize the effect that this has upon her daughter's mind, the sullenness and disrespect she feels toward her mother for obliging her to resort to subterfuge?

True, the average girl of from 14 to 18 exaggerates her make-up. But that is far more worth a mother's while to convince her of the poor taste and unbeautiful effect of too many cosmetics than to flatly forbid her to use any!

Washing Velvets.

As a good many small garments are being made this season of cotton velvet, it is useful to know the following ancient recipe: Wash the cotton velvet in lukewarm water, as you would do with linen or lawn; soap; rinse without wringing. Iron on the wrong side, both ways, length and width. If necessary the material can be ironed first on the right and then on the wrong side, with a moderately hot iron.

Delightful and unusual and easy to make gifts for the kiddies, that's what I have gotten together for you in this week's leaflet. A fee-ro-shush alligator, a comical puppy, a dolly tea set, washable bookcovers and we'll let the rest be a surprise because you'll never forgive yourself if you don't get these sketches and full directions for making these adorable gifts. Personally, I'm going to keep the fee-ro-shush alligator for myself, that we all had so much fun making. He's just too captivating with his enormous red mouth and sharp, sharp teeth (made out of white braid) and booful big red eyes. Just send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post and it be yours.

Any time that anyone tells you how immodest the girls of today are, do point out the difference between the decollete of today and that of the nineties. I sketched a few of the season's most successful ones, each designed by a different couturiere. And there and then I had to chuckle, remembering—no, not remembering the decollete, silly—how old do I look this morning?

Au revoir.

STILL A GUESS.

I RECENTLY received a very interesting hand from Mr. Levis R. Ayres, one of Philadelphia's leading players. It is a hand on which the Declarer quite correctly lays the ground work for an elimination play. However, when this is done he is now faced with a complete guess as to which hand to throw in for the successful culmination of the coup. The hand, a very interesting one indeed, follows:

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	2◇ (1)	2♠
2NT	Pass	5◇ (2)	Pass
6◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North suspects South's diamond bid to be a psychic and therefore withholds two Raises to see what South has to say.

2—North now knows that South's Opening bid was sound after the three notrump bid, which, of course, is a very strong bid. He therefore gives the full strength of his hand in the Raise to five diamonds.

On the play West opened the heart Knave; South won the trick, drew the trump and trumped two spades in the Dummy. A second round of hearts now disclosed the distribution of that suit to him. The hand was perfectly eliminated, but Declarer still had a guess. He could either play West for the King of clubs and throw him in with a heart, in which case a heart return would give him a ruff and discard, or else West would be forced to lead away from the club King; or, if East had the club King, the play of the Ace, followed by a small club would force East, who had no more hearts left, to lead a card which would give the necessary ruff and discard. Mr. Ayres, due to East's Overcall of two spades, placed the club King in the East hand and accordingly played the Ace and a small club. West, of course, won the trick and cashed a heart trick, which set the contract. The winning play, of course, would have been to throw West in with the heart—a most interesting situation.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

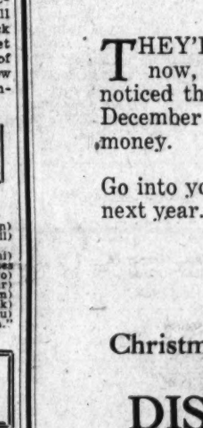
South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

ARE YOUR FEET COLD?

THE group of disorders in which medicine seems most likely to be on the threshold of discovery of practical importance is that of disturbances of the peripheral circulation, particularly of the legs. This group ranges all the way from ordinary cold feet, of which so many thousands complain, to gangrene caused by diabetes, Buerger's disease, and Raynaud's disease. In between there are many disorders of varying importance.

One or two basic conditions are responsible for the group. One is an insufficient size of the blood vessels caused by thickening of their walls. The other disorder is of the vasomotor nerves, a part of the sympathetic system causing spasm of the muscle of the walls of the small blood vessels and a decrease in their carrying capacity. These two sets of causes may operate side by side in a given case, or either may be at work without the other.

Since the thickening of the blood vessel wall is pretty near to being unchangeable it is important in each case to decide which is the cause or, if both are at work, which is more active in causing symptoms.

A test for this purpose has been devised by Drs. W. J. M. Scott and J. J. Morton. It is simply and easily applied, consisting in injecting a local anesthetic into certain locations and then noting the effects on the circulation and temperature of the feet. This is a very great advance over the old, homely method of shifting the feet back and forth between hot and cold water and watching whether the skin develops a glow, the circulation under the nails improves, and the temperature raises.

If it is found that the vasomotor nerves are principally or wholly at fault much the most promising treatment now used is to cut certain nerve roots along the sides of the backbone. But this is a somewhat severe operation and many want to avoid it. For those there are a number of lesser procedures of varying usefulness.

Among these are: Rest in bed or sitting with feet up, alternating hot and cold baths, exercises, X-rays to the lower part of the back, injections of milk and other proteins to cause fever, fever therapy by diathermy and possibly malaria, injection of alcohol into certain nerves of the legs, a procedure similar to that long used in chronic facial neuralgia, and injection of other chemicals into nerves.

If thickening of the arterial walls is the only cause of the trouble, or even the main trouble, there are still some possibilities from treatment.

By tying off some veins coming from the leg it is possible to increase the blood supply to the parts that are about to become gangrenous. Heat and posture are helpful in this group also. And protecting against infection is of great service.

Dr. Adson thinks it possible to prevent one-half of the amputations now done by applying the information we now have.

BENEFITED BY LIVER EXTRACT.

Mrs. C. M. C. writes: Liver extract for pernicious anemia, taken with orange juice, immediately started to help an aged cousin, 77 years old. She had dizzy spells, loss of weight, no appetite, and numbness of fingers and toes. These symptoms left, but it is necessary to keep up the treatment, for when she stops she feels worse. She attends to all household duties besides the care of an invalid sister, and is sprightly and as active mentally and physically as a 60-year-old person.

Taffeta for evening returns to add a crisp note—as well as a newly acquired suavity—to formal occasions. This junior frock is in a sophisticated pink, with ingenious puff sleeves, cartridge tucks in the skirt, a high neckline in front and an amazingly low back that is stopped in its downward swoop by a big rose velvet bow.

KOCHANSKI PLEASES SYMPHONY AUDIENCE

Paul Kochanski and his magic violin were the stellar attractions at yesterday's concert of the National Symphony Orchestra, held at Constitution Hall before a large and enthusiastic audience.

Hans Kindler wielded the baton with telling effect also and the orchestra gave good account of itself throughout the entire program.

It is almost trite to speak again of the constant improvement of the orchestra this season. But it is so apparent at every concert that it deserves at least a passing comment. There is a surety in the attack, a grace of production and an ease in the most difficult passages that justifies the conclusion by the most captious critic that here is an aggregation worthy of the world Capital to which it belongs.

Mr. Kindler has wrought wonders with the orchestral material at his command and he gets instant response to his slightest gesture. Teamwork is to be seen in each concert and that was an outstanding feature in the performance yesterday of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1, with its four enthralling movements.

Enchants Audience.

The first movement of the symphony awakened the interest of the audience at once as the instrumentalists delicately handled the measures, and the feminine second theme was carried by a splendid flute and good oboe in alternate statement. The simple theme of the second movement enchanted with its charming little sallies of fun, while the andante contained a musical novelty in the independent solo passage for the drum, a forecast of Beethoven's later use of the drum, distinctive in other symphonies.

The third movement did not fail of applause either, with its minuetto, an embryonic scherzo breaking through the bonds of the dance with exuberant humor. It was very colorful and given its full value in the matter of variety through Mr. Kindler's skillful reading of the score.

The concluding movement, "The Finale," reminded one of Haydn, but a Haydn of more youthful spirit and gayety, a trait occasionally revealed by Beethoven, perhaps as a relief to the inherent majesty of his scores.

Is Accorded Ovation.

Paul Kochanski was accorded an ovation and the tribute of the closest attention when he appeared to play the violin solo part in Tchaikovsky's ever lovely "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra." There is a ruggedness about his playing, a vivid color in his tone pictures not soon to be forgotten. Of course, compared to Kreisler, the verdict is somewhat to his disadvantage as he lacks to some extent the impeccable excellence of Kreisler. Yet yesterday's soloist is much younger and he will become a Kreisler in time, an ambition worthy of any violinist's bow.

Debussy's "The Afternoon of a Faun" was more vehicle for the orchestra to portray its versatality. To some in the audience it did not seem quite sprightly enough, but then even fauns have their off days.

The program finished auspiciously with a fine presentation of Liszt's second Hungarian rhapsody, always a test of an orchestra's capacity.

Abbie Mitchell Heard In Concert Recital

Abbie Mitchell, dramatic soprano, who was last heard here in support of Helen Hayes, in "Coquette," was presented last night in the auditorium of the Lincoln Temple Congregational Church in the first of a recital series. English, German, French and Creole numbers constituted a program which was received with enthusiasm by a large audience of patrons and music lovers.

The soprano, a native Washingtonian, who has been presented extensively on the continent, proved noteworthy for superb diction in rendition of the Brahms group, and the "Dieu de Grace" (Alfano), and demonstrated versatility in the French dialect rendition of "Que Que Solingai" and "Dance, Conni Conne," new arrangements of Creole folk songs by Camille Nickerson, of Howard University.

"CABIN IN THE COTTON." First National picturization of a story by Harry Harrison Kroll, starring Richard Barthelmess, supported by Bette Davis, Dorothy Jordan, Tully Marshall and Henry B. Walthall. Directed by Michael Curtiz.

Perhaps lacking some of the usual aspects of conventional screen entertainment, and leaning in some degree in the direction of analytical sociology, this thoughtfully prepared and well-made vehicle for the talents of one of the cinema's most reliable young actors, nevertheless, justifies its continuance through a second week.

Creating divergent opinions as to its value as a screen document, "Cabin in the Cotton" has prompted no one to impugn the sincerity, the skill or the effectiveness of Richard Barthelmess' portrayal of the character of the "poor white" who finds himself caught in the bitter class antagonism between landowner and tenant in the deep South. Barthelmess here approaches fine heights, both in the major movement of the plot and in the more romantic passages of the story where he is torn between his love for the daughter of the landed gentry and an honest affection for one of his own social station.

These feminine leads are entrusted to the capable hands of Bette Davis and Dorothy Jordan, nicely contrasted by natural endowment as well as by the necessities of Michael Curtiz' able direction. Others of note in the supporting cast include Tully Marshall, Henry B. Walthall and Burton Churchill.

Continuing as the bill's principal auxiliary feature is the two-reel comedy, "Hey, Pop," which signalizes Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle's return to the screen after a long and possibly unjust exile of a dozen years or so. Much of the old-time Arbuckle ebullience is revived as the action of the comedy progresses. A new issue of the Paramount Sound News is added.

WHAT! ONLY A MILLION?

That eminent actor, Mr. Richard Bennett, as the cartoonist catches him pointing out a few of the salient facts concerning the unique film play, "If I Had a Million," opening today at Loew's Fox, in which he gives away million-dollar certified checks the way you give away the sleeves out of your vest!

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

ANY ONE who has been reared to the belief that where there are large volumes of smoke there is apt to be a spark or two of fire, could not with complete passivity ignore the latest rumors that have been swirling about through local (and national) theatrical circles these past few days.

Since they are still merely rumors, no definite and unequivocal confirmation—or denial, either, for that matter—is to be had. Yes, many of the executives most immediately concerned have heard about it, but know "nothing more authoritative than you do yourself." Others profess not yet to have had their ears in the right places at the right times and so plead total ignorance, although it requires precious little explanation to inform them fully what it is you are talking about. So what?

So, for what it is worth—which, on the one hand, may be a great deal, or, on the other hand, nothing whatever—a report that is remarkably tenacious of life is going around to the effect that a deal is on whereby all of the RKO theaters in the country are to be turned over to Loew's, Inc., for operation in the near future.

Nothing that has been communicated to this column pretends to transfer to Loew's either ownership of or title to the RKO properties. The scheme seems to be, rather, simply one of hiring an operating company for a percentage of whatever gross it may be able to attract to the box offices placed under its managerial control. As I understand the prospective arrangement, when, as and if consummated, any losses suffered under the Loew management would still be borne by Radio-Keith-Orpheum. The percentage basis upon which this plan might be carried out has been variously outlined as contemplating a commission of from 3 to 5 per cent of the gross to Loew's, Inc., free of all incumbrance and exempt from liability.

Some color is lent the plan by the fact that Loew's, Inc., is pretty generally recognized in the motion picture industry as an organization that has mastered the intricacies of theater conduct as comprehensively as it is humanly possible to master a business so sensitive to the vagaries of the public mind and subject to such a wide variety of disturbing influences and uncontrollable factors. Loew's has been successful with the Fox houses it took over something less than a year ago from the disintegrated Fox Theaters Corporation, and there is no valid reason to suppose that it could not be equally efficient in the operation of the theater properties of any other holding group that might for any reason wish to step out from under the vast responsibilities of chain theater conduct on a national scale.

On the other side of the question, in the specific case of RKO, there is a half century of eminently successful theater operation on a national basis back of the Keith-Orpheum interests. Under no circumstances, I am led to believe, will any of the RCA-RKO units in the new Radio City development in Rockefeller Center, New York, be involved in the deal—if there is any deal.

And under no circumstances would the rumored project be given serious consideration here at this moment, were it not that it bears such a striking resemblance to the early reports of the contemplated assumption of Loew control over the former Fox properties, which nobody believed at the time, either.

All that smoke and not even a spark? I ask you!

Although Miss Catherine Cornell arranged its premiere for the same theater, in the same city, on the same day of the month as had augured such overwhelming triumph for "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," her crowning success, and otherwise had looked minutely to the fostering of all omens, signs and portents in its favor, her new production, of Andre Obey's "Le Viol de Lucrece," rendered into English by Thornton Wilder under the shortened title of "Lucrece," seemed somehow to fall a little short of enrapturing the critics on the occasion of its Tuesday night dedication in the Hanna Theater, in Cleveland, Ohio.

We arrive a bit belatedly, perhaps, at the telegraphic report of the premiere, which for a day or two now has reposed upon the gleaming surface of our richly carved oaken desk, heavily inlaid with cigarette burns and other scars of a long career in the hectic night life of the Fourth Estate.

We note somewhat sadly that William P. McDermott, dramatic critic of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, described the play as "one of the finest productions ever made in America," but added that it appeared to lack "dramatic momentum." It was very much "off the usual routine," he said.

Archie Bell, bearer of a noble name and critic of the Cleveland News, may the Lord have mercy on his soul, termed it "a magnificent production and a gesture in the right direction." He asserted, however, it would not be a popular success as compared with "The Barretts." Bell added that "the play is a starring vehicle for Katharine Cornell as a producer, not as a stage star."

While the audience paid respectful tribute to Miss Cornell and particular favor to the work of Robert Loraine and Blanche Yurka, imaginary stage properties piqued their curiosity no little and a strange stage technique left them frankly baffled. For instance, the opening of a door, when no door was visible, seemed to strike them as just a spot odd and the spinning of an invisible spinning wheel was another item that contributed to their mild confusion.

"Lucrece," in short, seems to have been slightly handicapped by a technique that was just a mite too new for the customers to handle with any comfort.

Speaking of out-of-town premieres, "Humpty Dumpty," the Laurence Schwab-B. G. De Sylva musical that Washington was to have seen at the beginning of the season, but didn't, has caught on in New York and is rated right along with "Flying Colors" as one of the outstanding hits. It is now known as "Take a Chance," in commemoration, no doubt, of what the authors and producers did after it had been a flop in Pittsburgh and taken off before ever reaching the Capital!

Now if Brown and Henderson can whip "Forward March" into similar shape, under its new title of "Strike Me Pink," it will be all right with us if the boys bring them both back here for a look-see any time now. Brown and Henderson, by the way, are keeping their principals under contract for the revamped show. Gracie Barrie, who had just been added to the cast when "Forward March" opened here, is singing at the New York Paramount Theater this week, but is still on call for her former part in the musical.

And Georgie White, since you ask, is whipping his "Scandals" into shape for the road with the original cast, excepting only Lehigh's little brother, Rudy, and Ethel Merman. The Gale Quadruplets are to be in it again, but one of them—Jean I think it was, although it may have been Jane or June or Joan—failed to read Mr. White's mind correctly and had been in Los Angeles less than 24 hours when she received the wire that necessitated her turning right around and coming back to New York again! Didja ever?

Joan Gale, incidentally, has been under contract to Fox Pictures for months and has been drawing her salary regularly, although as yet never given a part or asked into the same room with a camera or microphone. That, if you must know, is our idea of a swell arrangement—all pay and no work. Boy, howdy!

At the Walter Johnson testimonial dinner at the Shoreham last night, Barnee, conductor of Maxim Lowe's Riviera Orchestra, batted out a high one when he played the "Walter Johnson Testimonial March," his own composition written and arranged especially for this occasion.

It was scored as a hit.

COURSES IN SCHOOL ON DRIVING FAVORED

Connecticut Commissioner Speaker at Banquet of Traffic Engineers.

Establishment of a definite pattern of human conduct for automobile drivers as a means of removing the dangerous driver was prescribed last night by Robbins B. Stoeckel, motor vehicle commissioner of Connecticut, in an address before highway engineers and traffic authorities from various parts of the country.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the National Highway Board, division of engineering and industrial research of the National Research Council, Mr. Stoeckel advocated a standardization of every phase of the automobile situation, including speed limits and highway engineering, as well as control of human behavior as a step toward minimization of the accident menace.

"We should look into the character of all automobile drivers and determine which ones are fit to drive," Mr. Stoeckel said. "Courses should be introduced in schools to prepare boys and girls for automobile driving by teaching them to understand their own emotions and complexes. Every automobile driver possesses any number of complexes and any one of them may cause him to do something out of the ordinary."

Headway Is Reported.

Mr. Stoeckel revealed that considerable headway is being made in determining the speed limit for highways and that much is expected to be accomplished in this direction in regard to cities in the near future.

The motor vehicle commissioner told of the success of psychological tests given applicants for drivers' licenses in Connecticut and added the belief that a plan of this sort could be adopted throughout the country. Mobilization of great business forces and the arousing of public sentiment is necessary before progress can be made toward standardization of all aspects of motoring, he said.

Van Duzer Gives Report.

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic in Washington, earlier in the day presented the findings obtained so far in a local study to determine regulations that are obeyed and those that are violated. He said that in general it was shown that about 85 per cent of the drivers abide by the rules and 15 per cent cause trouble.

Between 5 and 13 per cent of drivers fail to give right of way to pedestrians and other drivers the traffic director reported. Another dangerous custom is entering an intersection late on an amber light, or a red light, he said.

The traffic meeting will continue throughout today. Roy W. Crum, director of the Highway Research Board, is in charge.

Suffering From Grip and Sinus Trouble; Cancels Performances.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—A complete rest of several weeks was ordered today by physicians for Miss Ethel Barrymore, noted actress, who became ill while motoring from New York to play the leading role in "Encore" in a New Haven theater.

Physicians said Miss Barrymore was suffering from grippe with sinus infection. On their advice she canceled appearances which she was to have made in Providence, R. I., and Boston.

The noted actress was ordered to bed in her hotel here yesterday. Physicians said her voice was so hoarse she could barely speak above a whisper and that her temperature had risen to 103, more than 4 degrees above normal.

Trio Taken to Sibley After Fight in Store

Three men were treated at Sibley Hospital last night for cuts, stabs and bruises received in a free-for-all fight in a store at 144 Bates street northwest. They were Morris Greenglapp, proprietor of the store; Jack Gerlather, 19, 5228 Conduit road northwest, and Alexander Ramsay, 70, of 228 Q street northwest. Gerlather was said to have been stabbed twice in the back and his condition is considered serious.

Four colored men were arrested in connection with the fight.

How Coughs and Colds Yield to Creosote

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Keeping the straight and narrow path through 25 years of economic ups and downs is not easy—but we haven't yet fallen short of our depositors' faith in us—and, what's more, we never will.

ARMY AND NAVY END DRILLS, LEAVE FOR BATTLE

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

A FEW side glances at the 1932 records of the Army and Navy football teams may not be amiss with the annual service classic only a day distant.

The first test of comparative ability of the two teams arrived with the opening game of the season. Army appeared none too impressive in a 13-to-0 victory over Furman, showing no back who could fill the shoes of the graduated Ray Stecher, Navy's nemesis in the 1931 Army-Navy game.

But Army's performance appeared brilliant in contrast to Navy's dull start of its campaign in which the Tars took it solidly on the chin from little William and Mary by a 6-to-0 tune. Navy showed a long series of defects, including faulty timing, fumbling and a weak offense and, sad indeed, did the outlook appear from the Severn.

The second week of the football campaign saw Army annihilate the inferior Carleton Team, using substitutes for three periods after the regulars had compiled a 12-to-0 lead in the early minutes. Army won by 57 to 0, and "Pick" Vidal, in the back field, loomed as a serious menace to Navy in December.

The same day saw an improved Navy Team romp to a 33-to-0 victory over Washington and Lee, with Gordon Chung-Hoon justifying his promised greatness of 1931, and the substitute, Borries, showing a fine flash of form. Navy's offensive seemed to be under way.

A week later Army met the first of its real tests—Pitt. An 18-13 defeat by the Panthers served only to add luster to West Point's record for Army actually outplayed Pitt for the greater part of the game and came from behind to lead by a point before Pitt scored its third touchdown. Ken Fields first displayed his punting ability.

While Army was battering away against Pitt, Navy was having its troubles with Ohio University and absorbed a 13-to-0 beating, traceable mostly to frequent fumbles.

Army's fourth game was with Yale, while Navy was meeting Princeton. A superb West Point attack smothered the Elis, 20 to 0, with Vidal and Fields starring, and Capt. Summerfield attaining the heights in the line.

Navy on the same afternoon showed improved line play to hold to a scoreless tie a Princeton team which had held Cornell to 0-0 the week before.

Sad indeed was the Navy outlook the following Saturday night after the William and Mary team which had beaten the Tars absorbed a 33-0 walloping from Army. Navy in the meantime was taking a 14-0 licking from Penn, but showing potential strength in all departments.

The Saturday of November 5 brought joy to both camps with Army's cup overflowing as a result of a crushing 46-0 victory over Harvard. Navy's glad tidings came in the form of a squeaky 7-6 defeat by a Columbia team that was unbeaten. But Navy's line actually outplayed Columbia's. Army's attack, however, then appeared irresistible.

On the same day, Pitt, the team that had beaten Army by a touchdown, met Penn, the team that had beaten Navy by two touchdowns, and the Panthers were able to win

Londos Wins Match in 38 Minutes

Garibaldi Victim of Airplane Spin of Mat Champion.

Bout, Tame at Start, Thrills Fans; Defeat Handed Dusek.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

THE Greeks have a hold for it.

This was definitely revealed last night at the Washington Auditorium when Gino Caribaldi, the challahjah, rushed upright into Jim Londos, the champiyawn, ready to give Londos a two-handed stiff-arm. Londos crouched. He jutted out his hard head and Garibaldi's tummy collided with it at full speed. Garibaldi went into hairpin shape and said, "Ooof!" Then the Greek gawd straightened out and threw the 212-pound Italian over his head with a vast shake of his shaggy mane.

Caribaldi landed like a Monument suicide. Londos wheeled around, scraped him up off the floor, spun him around about nine times over his head, and then dumped him reflectively on the mat. Garibaldi squirmed a squirm or two, but a philosophy seemed to strike him, so he just lay there and was counted out. The bout consumed 38 minutes.

There was one new note in the bout which was different from the customary Londos bout. At the start of the bout Garibaldi stole Londos' mythical bicycle and began pedaling around the banked turns of the Auditorium ring with furious pace. This is an astounding innovation in District wrestling. It is always Londos that does that.

Rivals Roll Out Of Ring.

Another somewhat new note occurred when Londos and Garibaldi rolled out of the ring on the sidelines, and while Referee Ed Brockman was trying to separate them got mixed up in the vortex of legs and leers and ended up with his shoulders pinned thoroughly to the floor, with Garibaldi on top of him. This gave Garibaldi a batting average of .500 for the night.

The preliminaries more than upheld their end of the bill. Rudy Dusek, the old show-thief, pulled his act again but fought a losing battle for a change, Frank Judson, former Harvard rassling coach, being presented with a decision over the Omaha bruiser. This bout vied with the 45-minute draw between Jim McMillan and Everett Marshall for the dubious title of "best preliminary."

Dashing conquerers in the remaining bouts were Johan Richtoff, blond Swedish Frankenstein, who ground Milo Steinborn into sausage meat in 8 minutes; Jim Healyn, reformed Australian, who defeated Jack Zarnos in 18 minutes, and Joe Cox, who made a vassal out of George Vassell in 23 minutes or something.

About 4,000 were present.

'Bama Improves In Drill on Coast

Made Choice by Some to Beat St. Mary's Eleven on Saturday.

San Francisco, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—With a warm sun beating down, Alabama's husky football squad romped through an impressive workout today in the final preparations for the game here Saturday with St. Mary's Gaels.

Coach Frank Thomas sent his charges through signal drills and concentrated in a defense against the aerial barrage he expects St. Mary's to lay down. Weather conditions completely reversed those of yesterday when the squad arrived in a downpour of rain. The Weather Bureau has forecast mild weather for the game.

Two members of the team, Walker and Chapell, half backs, had recovered today from what was believed to have been a mild attack of flu. The boys ran a slight temperature last night.

Coach Thomas was especially pleased at the improvement shown by John "Hurry" Cain, star full back, who is nursing a knee injury. The knee stiffened up a bit during the long journey and bothered Cain during practice yesterday.

As a result of the snap and drive shown by the Southerners in their workouts, some of the local observers have switched to make them favorites over the Gaels.

Those in charge of the game expect a crowd of around 30,000.

Feels Pretty Good Jumping From Last Place Club to Leaders.

Glendale, Calif., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Floyd ("Babe") Herman, strapping, slugging outfielder, was enthusiastic today about the trade which will take him to the Chicago Cubs next spring.

"I feel pretty good about jumping from the last-place team to the first," grinned the Babe. "It is my opinion that the Cubs will be the best team in the league again next year."

Herman wasn't sure where Manager Charlie Grimm intended to put him, but made a guess that he would play right field. He declined to say how he thought he could hit. "That's something you can't tell, but I'll be in there taking my cut at the ball." He hit .326 with Cincinnati last season.

"There's another advantage for me in the trade," Babe pointed out. "It isn't so far to the Cubs' training camp at Catalina, and I'll have more time for my golf." Herman takes great pride in his game and admits he has been shooting in the high seventies.

TRACK STARS TO PLAY IN G. U. GAME

Kelly, Hilltop, and Coulter, Carnegie, Alike in Sports.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

TWO track stars, whose brief but brilliant football careers parallel one another with remarkable fidelity, will strut their undeniable stuff at Griffith Stadium tomorrow when Georgetown meets Carnegie Tech in a game that promises to ring down the collegiate curtain in spectacular style.

The ten-second men are Al Kelly, Georgetown half back, and Tommy Coulter, Carnegie half back. Both are seniors. Neither played football until this season, spending all their other college days on the track. Kelly was national 70-yard indoor champion. Coulter is captain of Carnegie's team. It is the final game for both players, and they have the customary keen desire to go out in a blaze of glory.

Both have had their ups and downs this year. Both came to their teams with great reputations for speed, and then failed to come through as expected. Both in the last couple of weeks have come back into the spotlight. Kelly, whose use to Georgetown was dampened when the school changed from the Notre Dame to the Warner power system, is right back in there again, and they are making plays for him.

Coulter Was Given Chance.

Coulter, who is a Canadian, by the way, got his chance to make good two weeks ago when Bill Spisak was hurt. He was sensational in both the Pittsburgh and N. Y. U. games. In the latter game he scored Carnegie's touchdown and gained 109 yards himself from scrimmage.

Suffice to say that if either of them breaks loose into the clear Saturday, it will be up to the other one to bring him down. Few players in the country can match the speed of these helmeted gazelles.

Carnegie will exhibit two more bright stars Saturday—Billy Sample and George Kavel—who are cocaptains. Sample, center, has been invited to play on the All-Eastern team which meets the All-Western club out on the Coast, while Kavel will be a part of the All-Northern team which meets an All-Southern combination in Baltimore on December 10.

Twenty-eight Scots leave Pittsburgh at noon today. Coach Bob Waddell announced at the conclusion of yesterday's workout in Pittsburgh that at last the team had begun to show a bit of fire in expectation of Saturday's tussle, and with this change in mood Georgetown seems likely to be in for a warm afternoon.

Georgetown in Fighting Mood.

Speaking of changes in mood, Georgetown wins the game on that score. Another spanking workout yesterday, this time at Central Stadium, found the team once more full of ginger and rarin' to go for Saturday. It looks like Fred Callahan will win back his berth at center, which Frank Williamson stole some time back. Alan Cohen, sturdy guard, will be put in to plug up the hole left by Gildo Russo, injured.

Georgetown expects to meet passes with passes Saturday. Yesterday Coach Jack Hagerty stressed aerials, with Johnny Shimmens doing most of the passing, either to Capt. Ray Hudson or one of his backs. Al Kelly, among others, looms as a real threat among the pass receivers.

Tickets, which are on sale at Georgetown, Spalding's and the ball park, are selling rapidly enough to insure the biggest crowd of Georgetown's season.

Pros May Try Extra Period to Break Ties

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—A proposal that an extra period be played in national professional football league games, where a tie exists at the end of the regular playing period was made today by Tim Mara, president of the New York Giants.

In suggesting the innovation, which will be put before the other league executives at the annual meeting next spring, Mara pointed out that 10 of 43 games played this fall have resulted in a tie. The Chicago Bears alone have played six tie games.

Mara has suggested to George Halas, president of the Bears, that the plan be tried out in the game between the New York Giants and the Bears at Wrigley Field, Sunday.

Coolidge and Hoover Among Those to Wire Praise.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

HONOR upon honor has been heaped upon Walter Johnson during his quarter of a century of baseball effort here, but never has any athlete been given such a testimonial as he received last night at the Shoreham, when more than 700 turned out at a banquet in which all Washington participated.

Modest as they come, the former great pitcher and recently deposed manager of the Washington Club felt his face redden and his ears burn all evening. President Hoover, former President Coolidge and folks from all walks of life pointed to Johnson's prowess on the diamond and his life as a man. Representing the baseball clan were Clark Griffith, Edward B. Eynon, jr., Bucky Harris, Nick Altrock and Al Schacht. Both the Chief Executive and his predecessor sent messages of congratulation and wishes for Johnson's future success.

It was a three-feature affair, with two coming in rapid order shortly after the banquet part of the entertainment was concluded. First, Toastmaster Frank J. Hogan presented Johnson with an engraved testimonial which read:

"A quarter of a century has passed into history since you came to us from the land 'where the ghosts of buffaloes still dream.' Had you been an ordinary man of your profession you would have heard our applause in your hours of triumph and have witnessed our merciless 'thumbs down' in defeat—and passed into oblivion. But there was, and there is, nothing ordinary about you.

"For more than 25 years you have lived in the glare of pitiless publicity. And lived stainlessly.

"Loyalty—fidelity — straightforwardness—calm judgment—alertness—patience. These have ever been your characteristics.

"In victory, modest and generous.

"In defeat, undaunted, undismayed.

"We have seen you when the triumphant shouts of multitudes swelled into a roar and it seemed the very skies with acclamation rang. And we have been with you in the hour of sorrow and shared your grief.

"You have been an example and an inspiration to American boyhood. Greater praise can be sounded of no man.

"And so at the end of a quarter of a century——

"The citizens of the National Capital salute you."

Johnson's response showed him to be quite a humorist in spots, but throughout his talk one could feel the undercurrent of sadness at leaving Washington and his host of friends and admirers here. Johnson stated that he hopes to make another baseball connection shortly but has no definite offers at this time. He drew

MARYLAND U. READY WITH NEW PLAYS

Old Liners to Battle West. Maryland Tomorrow.

THERE was no shortening of time in the drill periods at either Western Maryland or the University of Maryland yesterday as the two squads, that will meet tomorrow in the Baltimore Stadium to decide the champion of the State, completed their preparations for the big game.

Dick Harlow, Terror coach, sent his charges through a long dummy drill on plays, some new and some old, while Curly Byrd did more or less the same thing at College Park. Byrd hasn't had as long to install "new stuff" for the game as has Harlow, but Curly did no wait until just this week to inject some new ideas in his team.

Curly started before the Hopkins game, not figuring the Jays to be overly hard to beat, to keep an eye on the Green Terrors and to add a play here and there for the game. When he opened concentration on the final game of the season last Friday the Old Liners had everything new that Curly planned on.

Wide Open Game Expected.

With such backs as Poppelman, Kiernan and Widmyer on hand Western Maryland looks to a wide open game from the University of Maryland. Passes are expected to play a large part in the Terrapin attack with Poppelman and Widmyer as the major receivers. If any of those aerials are completed in the clear they'll result in touchdowns because Western Maryland has no man who can catch these two fliers.

Maryland, too, is anticipating an overhead attack from the Green Terrors, an aerial offense coupled with a strong line attack. Jimmy Dunn and Bill Shepherd are the hard-running, powerful Western Maryland backs that Maryland looks to for plenty of trouble.

Neither eleven enters the game with any major injuries on the squad. Bud Shilling, Western Maryland end, has a cast on one hand, but if needed he can manage very well in a game.

Lipsky May Play Part of Game.

Joe Lipsky, Terror center, who isn't figured to start the game, giving way to Ed Hurley, a former end, has a bit of leg trouble, but if anything happens that calls for Lipsky to go into the battle he can take his place in the line-up.

Maryland's only casualty of last week's Hopkins game was Paul Kiernan, who bruised his hip, but he has been taking things easy and will be ready to go tomorrow.

Navy's 24-0 Win in 1890 Among Minor News of Day

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Down where the gold braid is thickest in the massed ranks of the huge cement horseshoe of Franklin Field, Philadelphia, a dozen or so of Rear Admirals and Generals of various degree will leap even more than the rest at the shrill of the starting whistle of another Army-Navy football game Saturday.

They're the veterans of the first game of the service schools ever played back in the bangtail days of 1890 at West Point.

Navy won that day 24 to 0, but there was little reference to such a minor matter in the public prints. It was of far more importance that Chicago was getting ready for a world's fair. Nelly Bly had just gone around the world in the phenomenal time of 72 days, and a new torpedo boat had achieved the remarkable time of 24 knots.

Cheyenne Indians Thar on Warpath.

It was rumored that a new invention, the incandescent electric light, would do away with gas light, Big Foot was on the warpath with the Cheyenne Indians in South Dakota, John L. Sullivan was heavyweight champion, the last of the three dollar bills were printed, the Santa Fe railroad wanted farmers to raise more wheat and the unemployed of San Francisco were petitioning the city government for relief.

There was little wonder then, that the journey of a tiny band from Annapolis, to play a game called football with the Cadets at West Point, was of any great interest.

But that was the beginning of a rivalry that starts all over again Saturday with the first official contest since the break in relations in 1928. Twice Army and Navy have played since, but both times with mental reservations and for charity only. Over the stretch of 42 years there has been but three other breaks, one in 1909, another from 1894-1898, and the third in the war days of 1917 and 1918.

Goat Was Mascot 42 Years Ago.

Saturday 78,000 will jam the great Franklin Field stands, and all the glamor and tradition, the dash of military that has grown with the spectacle, will be there. But for the generals and the admirals down front there will be more, too.

It was at that first game on the Plains 42 years ago that Navy appeared with a goat, now the official mascot of the Midshipmen. The Army and Navy Journal is hazy as to details. Either the animal was borrowed from the U. S. S. Galena, that had put into Annapolis before the team's departure, or it was purchased on the ground from a farmer. This part is known: The goat cost $1, and was purchased by Lieut. Charles H. Harlow, of Washington, retired commander, and Ensign F. B. Sullivan, now resigned, of Philadelphia.

Pitt Is East's Rose Bowl Grid Hope

Heavy Schedule and Victory Over Irish Gained Honor.

By PAUL ZIMMERMAN.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—In a surprise move, the University of Southern California today invited Pittsburgh as its opponent in the eighteenth annual rose tournament game at Pasadena January 2.

The announcement came at a moment when it appeared that Michigan might be able to clear the post-season barrier of the Big Ten Conference and get the call. It was generally supposed that even Colgate held a better chance of playing in the annual battle of the roses.

Willis O. Hunter, Trojan director of athletics, issued the invitation and an immediate acceptance was forthcoming from Don Harrison, athletic director of Pittsburgh.

In selecting Coach Jock Sutherland's team, the Southren California athletic board of control said it was motivated "by the extremely difficult and representative schedule that the Pittsburgh team has so successfully completed this season."

Played Coast-to-Coast Schedule.

The Panthers placed a nine--game schedule and came out without a defeat in a series of games which carried them into grid conflict with outstanding elevens from coast to coast. Two scoreless ties with Ohio State and Nebraska alone marred the season in which Army, Notre Dame, Stanford, Pennsylvania, CarnegieTech, West Virginia and Ohio Northern were beaten.

It will be Pittsburgh's third venture in Rose tournament play with the Panthers still seeking their first victory. Stanford won a 7-to-6 game in 1928, while the Trojans ran up the largest score in the annals of the classic in 1930, defeating the Southerland-coached aggregation which boasted several all-American stars, 47 to 14.

Although no official comment was made, Southern California athletic authorities had let it be known after the selection of their team to defend the far west's laurels was certain, that Michigan, undefeated champions of the Big Ten, would be invited if the conference rule against post-season contests could be lifted.

Observers in the West took today's move to mean that an advance poll of the Western Conference indicated there was no chance of the Wolverines being so favored.

The Trojan athletic board met in a prolonged session last night, but the members denied at that time an opponent had been considered. They said the meeting was one of routine, taking care of other impending business.

Rose Bowl Game Not New to Trojans.

Southern California, unbeaten and untied in eighteen straight games, has carried the banner of the Pacific slope in three previous Rose Tourney games, winning all of them.

Penn State lost to S. C., 14 to 3, in 1923, while Tulane was defeated, 21 to 12 last New Year's Day.

Comparative statistics favor the Far West, which has won seven games and lost five. Three were ties. Of the opponents, the Eastern delegates have won one game in eight starts. Two of these contests resulted in ties, leaving the West five triumphs.

The record of Middle Western teams stands at one victory and one defeat, while the South holds the edge with three wins, a defeat and a tie.

Southern California has one game remaining on its regular schedule. This is the annual Notre Dame conflict, which will take place here December 10. Pittsburgh's scheduled season has run its course.

1916—Washington, 14; Brown, 0.
1917—Oregon, 14; Pennsylvania, 0.
1918—Mare Island (Calif.) Marines, 19; Camp Lewis (Wash.), 7.
1919—Great Lakes Naval Training School, 17; Mare Island Marines, 0.
1920—Harvard, 7; Oregon, 6.
1921—California, 28; Ohio State, 0.
1922—Washington and Jefferson, 0; California, 0.
1923—Southern California, 14; Penn State, 3.
1924—Washington, 14; Navy, 14.
1925—Notre Dame, 27; Stanford, 10.
1926—Alabama, 20; Washington, 19.
1927—Alabama, 7; Stanford, 7.
1928—Stanford, 7; Pittsburgh, 6.
1929—Georgia Tech, 8; California, 7.
1930—Southern California, 47; Pittsburgh, 14.
1931—Alabama, 24; Washington State, 0.

Players of Pitt Squad Accept on Own Behalf

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Pitt's varsity football team, conqueror of Notre Dame and Army, made its own decision today to accept the University of Southern California's invitation to play the Trojans in the blue ribbon classic of collegiate football in Los Angeles January 1.

Informed at noon that the Panthers had been selected as the Eastern opponent in the annual East-West struggle, Athletic Director Don Harrison put the matter of acceptance squarely up to the players who have completed the most severe schedule in Pitt's gridiron history.

All the players voted for acceptance, expressing a surprising willingness to reenter training for the game following upon their so-called "suicide" schedule.

The Panthers played through ten games without a defeat. They were held to scoreless ties by Ohio State and Nebraska.

It will be Pitt's third visit to the Rose Bowl. Back in 1928, the Panthers lost to Stanford 7-6 in the classic, and in 1930 they were crushed 47-14 by Southern California, showing an amazing slump of form.

Rousing Send-Offs Mark Departures of Gridmen; Injuries Hit West Point

Scalpers Reap Harvest On Army-Navy Tickets

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Arrival of the varsity forces of Army and Navy football camps tonight sent ticket scalpers into renewed activity and the prices of their wares shot skyward.

Tickets which originally sold for $4.40 each were to be had by the pair for from $20 to $30, depending upon location. Even the least desirable tickets, calling for seats near the ground and at the ends of Franklin Field, were retailing at double their original price. None of the regularly established agencies had any tickets for sale at any price, but scalpers outside hotels in the central section of the city had a large supply.

Army is a favorite in the present betting, at odds of approximately 3 to 2. The game will be played before a crowd of nearly 79,000, of which exactly 78,078 will have paid admissions.

Doctors Hope to Have Vidal in Back Field for Soldiers.

"Tag" Football Game Marks Last Drill of Midshipmen.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 1 (A. P.).—The Army football squad completed the hard work of preparing for the Navy game today and climbed aboard the special train for Wayne, Pa., where it will remain at the Valley Forge Military Academy until Saturday.

The entire corps of cadets assembled at the gymnasium to give the squad an enthusiastic send-off. All the casualties from the Notre Dame game were included among the 35 players who made the trip with Capt. W. F. Dewitt, team doctor, and Wayne Hauck, trainer, giving them special treatments in hopes of getting them into condition to play.

Vidal Makes Trip.

Felix ("Pick") Vidal, star back, Pete Kopcsak and Abe Lincoln are the principal members of the casualty list, and it was announced today that Lawlor, left end, and Winn, reserve left tackle, will be unable to play.

Today's final practice was light and although the absence of several players from the first-string line-up marred the work a bit there was no lack of enthusiasm. Most of the time was devoted to signal drill, while the punters paid special attention to placing their kicks. The passing attack which failed against Notre Dame was thoroughly rehearsed, with the receivers showing improved ability at handling the throws of Fields and Buckler.

Bucknam, a second classman, who saw service against Notre Dame, was at center for the first team in place of Evans through the entire workout.

Regiment Cheers Middies.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Cheered by the Regiment of Midshipmen and hundreds of townspeople, Navy's football squad of 46 players left Annapolis late today for Philadelphia, the scene of the battle with Army Saturday.

The entire squad was in good shape after a final practice on the home field, bringing an optimistic feeling and a hope that the Navy might win a victory after ten years of waiting.

The last practice was chiefly offensive and was devoted for the most part to passing. First stringers played against the B team in "tag" football and several touchdowns were scored by the aerial method. There was, of course, no rough stuff and players had to consider themselves tackled when they were tagged.

Tomorrow's practice session in Philadelphia is to be chiefly limbering up exercises.

One player who had little hopes of making the trip was included. He is Robert W. Curtis, of Detroit, who on Thanksgiving Day was elected captain of the B squad. As a result of the election, he is to be permitted to sit on the bench in the uniform of a first-team member, but chances of his getting in the game are extremely slim.

The regiment of midshipmen leave Annapolis Saturday morning and return that night after the game.

HUNTER SETS ARMY-NAVY RECORD

Giant Pro Shoots 68 With Five Birdies; Four Under Par.

J. MONROE HUNTER, long-driving professional of Army and Navy Country Club, yesterday clipped a stroke off the noncompetitive record for his course by shooting the 18-hole layout in 68, 4 below orthodox figures.

Playing each nine in 34, Hunter bested the record of 69, which was held by Arthur B. Thorn, Woodmont pro. The giant Army and Navy tutor smared birdies on the fourth, eighth, ninth, tenth and seventeenth. He failed to equal par on one hole, the 391-par four third, where he smacked his tee shot out-of-bounds, but finished the hole in five. Hunter sank an 8-footer on the eighth, a 10-footer on the ninth and ran down a 20-foot put on the seventeenth for birdies.

He toured the course with Col. Scott Fulton and Col. Walter C. Sweeney.

His card with par follows:

Other officers whose names were presented by the nominating committee and who were elected are Mrs. Norman B. Frost, of Columbia, first vice president; Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, second vice president; Mrs. R. N. Midwest Football Eyes World's Fair

Eight Important Intersectional Contests Booked; Big Ten Is Busy.

Chicago, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Big Ten football, a little tattered and worn by disappointing 1932 gates, will try a comeback in the box office next fall with the most glittering program since the boom days.

Eight important intersectional games, six of them on Big Ten fields, are listed on the 1933 schedule in addition to all the fever-heat conference games of ancient tradition. The large crowds, expected at Chicago's World Fair, will get a chance to see many of the biggest games as the University of Chicago and Northwestern have 13 home games between them as gate magnets.

Every section of the Nation will be represented by powerful teams on the intersectional card—Stanford, Dartmouth, Army, Carnegie Tech, Virginia, Vanderbilt, Pennsylvania, and Pittsburgh. Notre Dame, also eyeing the World's Fair visitors, will play five of its nine contests at home, headlined by invasions of Pittsburgh, Purdue, Navy and its annual "natural," Southern California.

This is the intersectional set-up for 1933: October 7, Virginia at Ohio State; 14, Stanford at Northwestern, Vanderbilt at Ohio State; 21, Pittsburgh at Minnesota, Illinois vs. Army at New York. November 4, Carnegie Tech at Purdue; 11, Ohio State at Pennsylvania; 25, Dartmouth at Chicago.

Notre Dame's intersectional foes will invade South Bend in this order: October 7, Kansas; 28, Pittsburgh; November 4, Navy; 25, Southern California.

HORNSBY STARTS WORK,

St. Louis, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Rogers Hornsby, deposed manager of the Chicago Cubs, who will be given a chance to come back with the St. Louis Cardinals next season, today began taking workouts in a gymnasium to get in physical trim before the spring training period.

Hornsby expressed assurance he would be able to get in good shape and bring his weight down to 170 or 175. He tipped the scales at 187½.

STARBOARD LIGHT EASY WINNER AT JEFFERSON PARK

Sandwrack Second, With Finnic Next Over Finish Line.

Favorite Ends Reign of Long Shots After Trio Score.

JEFFERSON PARK RACE TRACK, Dec. 1 (A.P.). — After three straight longshots had played havoc with the form players, Mrs. M. Eckman's Starboard Light came along to relieve the monotony and the bankrolls with an easy victory in the featured Chef Menteur Purse here this afternoon. Capably ridden by Apprentice A. Beck, the gelded son of Star Hampton passed the pagoda pole a good two lengths clear of Sandwrack. Finnic was third, five additional lengths behind. Starboard Light paid $4.20 and covered the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:46 1-5.

The Eckman colorbearer was reserved off the early pace while Finnic and Kingpin vied for the lead closely aligned. Sandwrack suddenly spurted into command leaving the back stretch, but at the same time the favorite began his move. Turning for home Starboard Light forged to the front and going easily moved away through the stretch. Finnic beat tired horses for the show.

Irfaneh Is Victor in Opener.

Followers of the flashy apprentice rider, Monte Parke, younger brother of former Jockey Ivan Parke, began the day right when the elderly mare, Irfaneh, registered in handy fashion over a capacity field in the curtain raiser. Favorite at $6.80 for $2, Irfaneh led Vladimir to the judges by a length and a half with Watchgirl coming from far back to annex third money. Pennant Bearer had plenty of early foot and Parke rated Irfaneh close to the gelding's pace to the stretch, where the choice overtook the pacemaker and drew clear. Vladimir raced forwardly all the way.

The Morvich filly, Morheart, made a valiant try to give Apprentice Parke a double in the second event but had to be content with second position, a length behind the longshot, Ellen D Tombereau was a good third. Morheart broke slowly, but Parke sent her up very fast to open a wide lead. Ellen D., however, gradually closed ground from a position in the rear flight and wore down Morheart in the stretch under strong pressure. Tombereau forced the pace but weakened at the end. The winner returned $34.80.

The third resulted in a rousing finish with Ennis managing to head Figuriste out of the purse. Six lengths behind the pair came Miss Frisky to account for the short end of the purse. The winner returned $24 and holders of a winning daily double ticket received $361.80. Melvin Lewis broke his mount with the first flight and took a slight hold on the ultimate winner as Yankaway showed the way to the head of the stretch. When the pacemaker stopped Ennis took command, but had to be sharply ridden to beat Figuriste.

Broad Axe, 9 years old, and still going strong, added his name to the day's list of upset victors by gaining a nose verdict over the heavy favorite, Judge Lueders, in the sixth contest. Dandy Dan lost the place by a length and a half. Judge Lueders raced close to the pace, but he could not stave off the great rally of Broad Axe which passed nine horses from where he started to get up to win in the closing nod. The winner paid $56.

WASHINGTON women have their first fling at tournament bowling this afternoon when the Fifth Avenue Meyer Davis Sweepstakes opens at the Lucky Strike Alleys. A field of 60, including Margaret Leaman, the defending champion, will vie for the top prize.

The second block of the fifteen games comprising the tournament will be rolled over the King Pin Alleys and the affair will wind up back at Lucky Strike. Through the generosity of Bill Wood, there will be no charge for games, thus with all entrance fees (which is $3), the winning lady will be well prepared for Christmas.

A second tournament will open today at Bethesda. It is the Maryland State Sweepstakes, open only to residents of the Old Line domain. Duckpinners of nearby communities will roll their initial blocks today and visiting bowlers will roll tomorrow. A week from tomorrow the scene shifts to Baltimore, where the semifinal and final blocks will be run off.

Ida Weinberg chalked up the highest individual scores in the Ladies Federal League last night, rolling a game of 137 and set of 330. Treasury turned in a 526 game and Veterans' Administartion toppled the bottles for a 1,487 set.

Tribell and Feaster split the high game prize in the War Department League at Arcadia, each rolling 147, but Feaster came in for additional glory when he finished with a high set of 368. Statisticians collected the team money on the strength of a 572 game and 1,662 set.

"Dutch" Neuman's 362 set was high on the King's Palace quintet, which nosed out Lucky Strike in a National Capital League match at Lucky Strike, "Chief" Lovett's 394 was best for the losers. The old maestro, Howard Campbell, turned in the best game of the evening, 148.

Burdett's 157 and 386 scores topped the Independent League at Lucky Strike. Internal Revenue blasted the maples for a 579 game and 1,724 set.

Helen Doyle was leading lady in the Intersorority League at Columbia by virtue of her 114 game and 313 set. Chi Sigma, No. 1, outdistanced the teams with its 497 game and 1,388 total for the three.

As a result of its clean sweep over V. M. I. while Princeton was losing the odd game to Lehigh, Yale last night moved into first place in the Intercollegiate League. Individual honors for the evening were accorded Vandoren, of Maryland, who rolled a 140 game, and Garnett, of V. P. I., who finished with a 359 set. Navy rolled a 570 game and 1,624 to win the team prizes.

Frank Falck bumped off 140 pins to win high game prize in the Interior Department loop at Columbia. Set honors were won by Jim McKinley, who rolled 346. Disbursing took the team game with 578 and Survey copped the set with 1,554.

Borden and Yerrick divided the booty in the I. C. C. Examiners League at Columbia. Borden rolled high game, 127, and his confrere, high set, 340. Finance and Recapture ran a dead heat for the team game laurels, each scoring 514, but the former won the set prize by a comfortable margin with its 1,494.

Brad Mandley went bowling in the Recreation League in big league fashion at the G street alleys last night. His three games were 138, 143 and 148, a 429 set. Remarkable as the score was, however, it failed by a considerable number of pins to break the league mark, which happens to be 495, and is held by Joe Pricci. Book, of Washington, rolled a 608 game, and Cook's Bakery amassed a 1,740 set.

AT THE POST

DEAR AL: JEFFERSON PARK, DEC. 1.

It was beginning to look like every day here was going to be the last day at Bowie, if you know what I mean, until Starboard Light stepped down the gangway to give the favorite players a breather. The influx of good jockeys will be felt from now until the start of the Florida racing. Mel Lewis and Parke are standing out like diamonds. Gilbert is coming this way, but there was no sign of him around the paddock this afternoon. Horses that ran in Maryland were being unloaded steadily this morning and some of our friends will be getting in action in a few days. I have a couple that failed me up the line. I'll let you have them. BILL.

FIRST RACE—DOLLAR PRINCESS had a hard time finding racing room in that race behind Flying Don, being jammed against the rail most of the way. Tomorrow, I expect Bagur to find the right route. DR. SYNTAX is one I met in Maryland last spring. May take the second money ahead of FERVOR.

SECOND RACE—CHIANTI has displayed fine form here and this looks like another set of brackets. Putting LORD TOURNAMENT second. This is the famous run-out horse, but they tell me he has learned to turn the corners. If so, he'll show plenty of speed. ARROW for the show and a chance to upset everything.

THIRD RACE—CHATEAGLE is in fine shape and will be hard to beat if he escapes the also eligible list. POLAIRE and RED FELLOW appear to have the edge on the others.

FOURTH RACE—ROLLING SEA has done everything asked here and a little bit more. Cox brought this Atheling II mare up from sixth to take a purse the other day. Only picks up 3 pounds. PORT O' PLAY, another winner at this course, should take the place from KELSO.

FIFTH RACE—GRAND PRINCE is still waiting to show the boys a thing or two in a sprint. Left Maryland in good shape. ALTMARK and ANTE-BELLUM look like the ones to beat.

SIXTH RACE—HURAWAY shares top weight with the leading contenders in this, but can carry a load well. This one to beat SWITCH and ELKHART to the wire.

SEVENTH RACE—PORTMESS, SINGING KID and PACHECO. That's the way I like them in the final.

GA. MAY PLAY ON COAST.

Atlanta, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The Atlanta Journal says it has been informed the University of Southern California and the University of Georgia football teams will meet in Los Angeles next season.

Southern California defeated the Georgians 60 to 0 a year ago in their game on the West Coast. The 1933 schedules have not been announced by either school, but the Journal said the game may be played December 2.

REISS LEADS HOLY CROSS.

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Charles Reiss, of Baltimore, today was elected captain of the Holy Cross football team for the 1933 season.

John V. Earls, of Cincinnati, was appointed varsity football manager for next year.

O'LEARY, NEW G. W. COACH, ON SCENE

Pixlee's Basket Ball Aid Astounded by Size of Players.

WITH Ted O'Leary, new assistant coach, on hand and Head Coach Jimmy Pixlee acting as overseer, George Washington University's basket ball team opened practice operations yesterday at the Colonials' gymnasium with the biggest, tallest and most sharpshooting band of aspirants a local college ever had.

O'Leary, who was leading scorer in the Big Six Conference last year while with the University of Kansas, upon his arrival yesterday was astounded by the height of the Colonial squad. Out of the 20 men who have a definite chance of making the team, only two are under 6 feet tall. And these two are almost certain regulars, by reason of their experience, speed and accurate eyes—Forrest Burgess and Johnny Fenlon.

Three men stand 6 feet 5 inches up in the air—Wick Parrack, sensational forward; Cy Hertzler, center, and Oasie Wickham, ace of last year's freshman team. Bill Noonan, former all-high center, is 6 feet 4, while Ozzie Wray, Jack Tompkins and Kirk Norton stand 6 feet 3. Wayne Chambers is 6 feet 2, and Capt. Otts Zahn, Billy Parrish, Dallas Shirley, Lavergne Sherill, Fred Mulvey, Truman Keesey and Lee Carlin range from 6 feet to 6 feet 2.

There are four Washington boys on the team—Burgess, Zahn, Shirley and Noonan.

Virtual disappearance of the pivot play is likely at G. W. this year, in view of the new rule which prohibits the pivot man to hold the ball longer than three seconds. A new scheme for handling the ball under the basket was tried yesterday and the players took readily to it. It engages the services of the two forwards, with the pivot man acting only in a blocking or deceptive manner.

RETZLAFF, WINE BANNED.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The State Athletic Board of Control today suspended Charley Retzlaff, of Duluth, and Frankie Wine, of Billings, Mont., for 90 days and fined each 50 per cent of their purse because of the showing they made in a bout at Detroit, November 25.

The bout was stopped and declared "no contest."

TERRYS FACE BROOKLAND TONIGHT

League Crown Prize in Charity Battle at Ball Park.

TERRY'S and the Brookland Boys' Club elevens await the whistle that will send them into battle tonight at Griffith Stadium in a game to decide the championship of the Independent League, 150-pound division, and a two-year-old question concerning the relative merits of the clubs. All proceeds from the game will be donated toward a fund for the relief of needy Veterans of Foreign Wars. The kickoff will be at 8 o'clock.

Last season when Terry's, playing as the Palace Athletic Club, defeated Brookland, 6-0, to win the title by a nose, there were many loud protests from the northeast section of the city and a general demand for a second game. Somehow the teams never got around to it.

The first game between the two this season resulted in a scoreless tie. One of the largest crowds to see a sandlot game this season viewed the spectacle.

Much Betting on Game.

Although the entire amount of gate receipts collected tonight will be turned over to the veterans fund, a victory will net the winner a tidy sum in the way of private wagers and the league prize. The latter consists of the franchise fees of all teams that were entered in the league. Estimates of the betting range from $1,500 to $2,000.

An odd fact brought to light by the rivalry between the teams is that Jim Howe, Brookland coach, formerly attended Notre Dame University, but has schooled his players in the Georgia Tech style of play. Among other systems, that of the Irish is noticeable in Terry's play.

A parade will precede the game. Veterans of Foreign Wars 100-piece band will congregate at Seventh and Rhode Island avenue northwest at 7 o'clock and lead a contingent of veterans up Seventh street to the ball park.

Following are the starting line-ups and players of both teams, and the officials:

BRITISH TRIP PLANNED BY SARAZEN

Issues One-Man Challenge to England's Best Golf Pros.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Gene Sarazen, completing the greatest year of his extraordinary golfing career, has already begun a winter campaign looking toward an overseas invasion in defense of the British open championship and a one-man challenge to the best professional talent in the British Isles.

Sarazen's 1933 plans, as revealed today through his business manager, Ray McCarthy, for the first time, contemplate leaving for England in April for a series of singles matches with British rivals in advance of the open championship and Ryder Cup matches.

Challenged by Compton To 72-Hole Match.

The American champion already has been challenged to a 72-hole test with Archie Compton. His program also may include matches with Arthur Havers, Charles Whitcombe, Percy Alliss and Fred Robson.

The idea seems to be for Sarazen to "soften up" the opposition for his Ryder Cup teammates, who will be over en masse for the two climax events of the spring campaign on British links. At the same time the British will have a good incentive to rally their defenses, with Sarazen as a spur, and seek some revenge for the shellacking they took from the American homebred professional team at Scioto in 1931.

Sarazen and McCarthy have not yet decided whether the winter schedule will include participation by the champion in the two big money events on the West Coast, the Los Angeles and Agua Caliente opens. This depends on the financial inducements, although it is a fact Gene has collected on the Pacific slope a good share of the $100,000 he has won in tournament prize money within the past ten years.

He won the Agua Caliente first prize of $10,000 in 1930 and was runner-up in the Mexican classic last winter.

Now Playing Best Game Of Career.

There doesn't seem much doubt that Sarazen has been playing the best golf of his life this year and is in good condition to take on all-comers, here or abroad. After winning both the British and American open championships with record scores he played 45 rounds of exhibition golf last summer at an average of slightly over 71 strokes per round. His route stretched from Lenox, Mass., to Dallas. He set course records at Terre Haute, Ind., and Oklahoma City and equalled a course record at Madison, Wis. His lowest round was a 65 at Terre Haute.

Already well known for his stamina and long-hitting, Gene now attributes his come-back to three things—improved bunker play, ability to play the wind better and more consistent putting. The driver is his best club but he is deadly now from the bunkers, with a niblick he designed himself. He probably misses fewer putts of the 6 to 10 foot variety than any professional in the game.

LITTLE CASEYS WIN AGAIN.

The Knights of Columbus 115-pound five scored its third consecutive victory at the expense of the Mount Rainier Boys Club team last night, winning by a score of 27-17 in an interesting game. Collins, with 16 points, led both teams in scoring.

Seeking their third consecutive victory, the Clovers will battle the Coast Artillery five tonight at the Artillery Armory, Sixth and Water streets southwest. All Clover players are requested to report at 8 o'clock.

(Herewith is the sixth of The Post's series of golf articles.)

(Indian Spring Club Pro).
As Told to Dave Herman, Post Staff Golf Writer.

IF you have ever tried to play a shot from in the woods, with your ball directly under a pine tree, a stump in front of you and loads of other obstacles to impede your progress to the green, you can imagine how I felt on the morning of September 27 of this year.

Absolutely stymied!

Such was the case on the fourteenth hole at the Columbia Country Club in the Maryland open championship. This hole is a dogleg, winding to the right, with a trap on the fairway in this direction, as well as trees stretching back from the rough. The right of the green is well trapped, and one has to hit two perfect shots in order to land on the carpet. The hole measures 380 yards, a par 4.

On the first nine I played my shots exceptionally well and was out in 34, but 1 under par. I knew that if I steered clear of the rough or other hazards along the journey I would finish with a pretty good score for the morning. One of my partners and a witness to the shot I am about to describe—certainly one of the best shots I ever made in my life—was Al Houghton.

Well, at the fourteenth, something went wrong with my tee shot. I pulled in the clubhead toward the left hip in going through with it, and by cutting across the ball I naturally sliced. The ball headed for the trees deep in the woods. When I arrived at the spot I noticed that I was pretty well blocked on all sides, with my ball under a tree, a wide stump hurling its challenge at me.

This really had me worried for a minute, and I knew that I was going to have a tough time even getting it out. To add to my troubles, I was forced to stand with the bushes in my face and look down at the ball through the pine needles. I decided to use a spade mashie. I needed loft, and a small club in executing this shot, especially with a tree, stump and bushes to battle—and the spade mashie was the logical one to use.

I lashed across the ball, hitting rather hard. The ball came in from left to right, whizzed around the stump, tore through the branches, had enough carry to soar over the traps on the right of the carpet, and dropped 6 feet from the pin. The ball went 150 yards or more. I never dreamed I could do it.

Johnson also paid tribute to Joe Cronin, his successor, who sent a congratulatory telegram, asking Washington fans to give him the same cooperation which they gave Johnson.

The other highlight was the showing of special scenes during and in connection with the Nationals' 1924 world's series victory over the New York Giants. This movie reel was especially made by the Pathe Company and was presented to Johnson after the banquet.

Washington radio broadcast stars volunteered their services for the entertaining features, being joined by Altrock and Schacht, comedians of the Washington Baseball Club. They were: George O'Connor and Matt Horne, Jeannette Bittner and Gene Kressin, Maxine Kindleberger, Jack Bowie, Dorothy Davenport, Strickland Gillilan, Edwin Steffe and Fred East and Bob Cotta.

CALVARY RALLIES TO WIN.

Coming from behind in the closing minutes of the game, Calvary M. E. swept ahead of the Y. M. C. A. five to a thrilling 37-33 victory last night. Colison and Harding led the uprising.

Stocks Renew Advances As Short Buying Appears

Average Gain of 1.4 Points Recorded; Sales Drop to 748,550 Shares.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—A good rally by wheat coincident with further recovery of sterling exchange found the stock market responsive today and share prices moved higher.

Trading was hardly animated, but the tone was better throughout virtually all the session, with the result that net gains of 1 to 3 points were fairly numerous. The market still looked highly professional, only this time shorts were repurchasing. Sales totaled 748,550 shares.

Contents of the British debt note were not divulged during trading hour, although the fact that it had been received and was soon to become public contributed something, perhaps, to the upturn in stock exchange spirits. Business news was meager.

Steel issues were rather sluggish. Steel common's net advance of half a point fell considerably under the average gain for industrials, although the senior issue was up a couple of points. Case and Harvester reflected the stronger gain quotations, while American Tobacco B recovered about half its Wednesday loss. American Can, American Telephone, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Chrysler, National Biscuit, North American and Consolidated Gas were up 1 to 2 net. Rails displayed little enthusiasm; however, Santa Fe rose more than a point and Union Pacific down 2. Homestake, Crown Cork, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol and Checker Cab gave a reasonably good account of themselves.

Foreign currencies on the whole were steady to firm, but Chinese tael made another new low in common with bar silver. The Bank of France's weekly statement showed a rise of 33,000,000 francs in gold holdings, while the British Central Bank's stock was slightly off. Foreign bonds, especially Australian, improved although United Kingdom 5½s strengthened, too, in active dealings.

BOND PRICES STEADY ON POUND RECOVERY

Market Gains One-Tenth of Point as Sales Rise to $8,588,000.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The bond market steadied today under the cheerful influence of another sharp rally of the British pound sterling and a substantial rebound of wheat prices.

The foreign department made the best showing of the day with gains ranging from 1 to 4 or more points in a number of issues allied with the United Kingdom. A few of the low-priced railway liens came back with advances of a point or more, while the United States Government list turned active in late trading with liquidation in the Treasuries.

Sales totaled $8,588,000, par value, which, although not up to normal, was the largest aggregate in several weeks. The average for 60 domestic corporate bonds, however, was up only one-tenth of a point.

Gains of around 4 points were recorded by issues of Australia, Brisbane City and Sydney City, while loans of New South Wales were up more than 3. The largest turnover in this group was in British 5½s, which advanced 1¼ points. Rallies of about a point were held by obligations of Argentina, Canada and Germany. Some of the Japanese firmed after early weakness.

Railway liens that recovered 1 or more points included some of Allegheny Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Canadian National, Canadian Northern, Erie, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific and Southern. There were a number of small losses, however, in the transportation group, and bonds of St. Paul, New York Central and Northern Pacific were heavy.

The utilities and industrials were a trifle irregular. The best grade maturities were comparatively steady and the trading volume generally was light. Paramount Famous Lasky and Paramount Publix loans dropped more than a point, and Laclede Gas 5½s of 1953 were off 4½ points. Gains were registered by issues of Republic Steel, Philadelphia-Reading Coal & Iron, Pressed Steel Car, Sinclair, Studebaker, United Drug and Utilities Power & Light.

Federal bonds were dull most of the session, but uncertainties regarding new Treasury financing brought out a larger volume at lower prices in the last hour. Declines ranged from 1-32d to 8-32ds of a point.

Business Revival Due in '33, Babson Vice President Says

Kansas City, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The worst is over and a business revival is now in the making, Ralph B. Wilson, vice president of the Babson statistical organization, told a group of Kansas City real estate men and other leaders here today.

"The low point of employment was reached last July," he declared. "Before 1933 is over you will see a vigorous upturn in employment trends throughout general industry. It is not unreasonable to expect business to reach normal by the close of 1934.

"If this forecast is even approximately true there is better business ahead for all of us for several years to come.

"We'll be on the road to recovery long before the great mass of people realize it."

"There is a scarcity of finished merchandise in the hands of retailers," Mr. Wilson observed, commenting on Nation-wide conditions, "and more goods constantly are being consumed, even under present conditions, than are being produced. A flood of orders may burst at any time and find the retailers' cupboards bare. Rush orders will be flashed to the factory and the factory whistle, the beginning of production, will blast once more. Business activity will rebound from its overdepressed state and it is possible the initial rise will be sharp.

"Already harbingers of improved business are bobbing up here and there in our industrial foliage. There recently has been more than seasonal activity in the lumber business, silk, wool, cotton, shoes, steel-mill activity, coal production and car loadings. This gain has been held. The volume of business has gone up recently without any extension of credit, which indicates a healthy situation."

Burlington Road Ties Up $92,000

Restraining Order Is Issued Against Paying Clarke in Dam Dispute.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Dec. 1 (A.P.).—A temporary restraining order in favor of the Burlington Railroad, withholding payment of approximately $92,000 of the funds of John T. Clarke, of New York, was issued in Federal Court here today by Judge J. Foster Symes, of Denver.

The order represented another phase of the Boysen Dam litigation which has been pending in Federal Court here since 1906. It was the outgrowth of an order issued here a year ago to the Clarke interests to remove a portion of the Boysen Dam on Wind River, in Fremont County.

Mr. Clarke refused to comply with the order, and the railroad was forced to defray the expense of lowering the height of the dam. The railroad, in its present action, seeks to tie up funds to be paid Clarke for the sale of his power interests in Fremont County to reimburse it for the cost of lowering the dam.

Hope of Rift's End In Copper Deferred

Demands of Roan Mine for Production Causes Delay in Parley.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Hope for ending the rift that has appeared in the international copper conference, now being held here, was deferred today until next week.

The demand of the Roan Antelope Mining Co. that it be permitted to increase its production quota for 1933 was turned over to the British Empire producers for further discussion, the conference deciding the matter was one for that group to work out. It was expected further discussion would be arranged with the Roan Antelope management next week.

Pending solution of this problem, the conference concerned itself only with routine matters. It was stated that J. Y. Murdoch, president of the Noranda Mines, had left for Canada in belief that no further progress could be made this week. Producers other than Roan Antelope were reported willing to set a production limit for 1933 at 20 per cent of capacity, the same as in 1932.

Electric Bond & Share gained a substantial fraction, coincident with the firming of prices on the big board. American Gas & Electric was up about a point. Cities Service, United Light & Power "A," American Superpower and Niagara Hudson Power were steady.

Deere & Co. reflected the advance in Chicago wheat prices, gaining more than a point.

Pan-American Airways' announcement that contracts had been let for two types of planes, designed for transocean business in linking this country eventually with Europe for commercial aviation, was accompanied with a rise of a point in the stock, pushing the price above 20.

A. O. Smith advanced moderately. Other specialties were quiet.

Fresh Eggs Price Drop Laid to Production Rise

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Recent weakness in fresh egg prices here was said by dealers today to be in line with the usual seasonal trend.

Production of fresh eggs has increased moderately from the low level of November, and prices have eased an average of 8 cents a dozen for the best known marketable grades. Storage eggs have been advancing in about the same degree due to lower-than-average stocks in leading markets, it is said. Present stocks of storage eggs in New York are approximately 251,000 cases, against 346,000 cases a year ago. In the last few weeks the price of Pacific Coast whites (fresh), a leading variety, has dropped to 37 cents a dozen from 45 cents. In the same period the best refrigerator mixed color eggs have risen several cents to around 29¾ cents a dozen.

WHEAT VALUES GAIN IN CHEERFUL TRADING

Prices Climb 2 to 2⅞ Cents as December Deliveries Become Moderate.

Chicago, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Liveliest upturns grain markets have achieved in many weeks resulted today from banishment of dread about chances of unwanted immense deliveries on December contracts here.

Instead of the wheat pit being swamped by waves of liquidating sales, an active general purchase movement developed, and wheat jumped 3 cents a bushel. A reason was that official reports showed the total unsettled open interest in December wheat here had been reduced more than 10,000,000 bushels yesterday, and that deliveries today appeared to be finding a ready outlet to mills, being accepted fast because of premiums paid on wheat available for immediate use.

Wheat closed strong at almost the day's top, 1 cents to 2⅞ cents above yesterday's finish; corn, 1⅛ to 2¼ cents up; oats, ⅜ to ⅞ cent advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

December Deliveries Less.

From the outset, it was apparent that Chicago deliveries today on December wheat contracts would be of less volume than had generally been expected. This was borne out later by the fact that up to the end of trading the amount delivered was comparatively moderate, 3,120,000 bushels. A sharp new advance in British exchange rates counted also as a stimulating factor, together with Winnipeg reports of European purchases of 800,000 bushels of wheat from Canada. Argentine cables telling of temperatures above 100, threatening damage to crops, were likewise current.

Intensifying widespread bullish data that spring up regarding wheat was a comprehensive report from a leading unofficial authority summarizing domestic winter crop conditions adversely affecting 10,000,000 acres southwest and west. The statement suggested that because of prolonged drought in parts of Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas acreage reduction of United States winter wheat would be well in excess of trade expectance, and was indicative of a decided shortage in the next harvest. Latest estimates of the Chicago open interest in December wheat were that the total was now less than 14,000,000 bushels.

Corn and oats reflected the buoyant course of wheat. The seaboard announced more than 300,000 bushels of corn had been disposed of for export.

Provisions tended upward with hog values and with grain.

Idaho Bank Is Reopened After 2 Months' Closing

Twin Falls, Idaho, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The Twin Falls Bank & Trust Co., closed under a bank holiday order of the city council for two months, was reopened for business today following reorganization.

Stock in the reorganized bank is held by about 500 persons, most of them depositors. All deposits less than $200 are subject to checking without restriction. Most depositors of $200 or more have become stockholders by the surrender of all or part of their balances for the purchase of stock. The city's other two banks had been closed prior to the bank holiday, which left residents without banking facilities.

Rice Prices Firm.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Reports in the rice trade say that a fair distribution is noted in the principal domestic centers. Millers are reported taking stocks of rough rice in good volume. Prices are firm.

COTTON PRICE CUTS SMALLER IN TRADING

March Sells at 5.92 as Market Closes 1 Point Up to 2 Down.

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—Cotton fluctuations were irregular today and with trading relatively quiet the market was responsive to moderate orders either way.

Southern hedge selling early in the day and again at the close caused reactions but at other times offerings were not large and rallies occurred on trade, Liverpool and local buying.

March contracts which had declined to 5.85 shortly after the opening, rallied to 6.02 or a net gain of 9 points, but reacted to close at 5.92. The general market closed barely steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 2 points.

The market opened 1 point higher to 3 points lower. Relatively firm Liverpool cables aided by an advance in sterling exchange were offset by moderate selling orders from the South. Hedge selling coupled with some local pressure caused prices to react to the lows for the day in the early trading. After the market had sold off 5 to 9 points from the best and to net losses of 6 or 8 points, Liverpool buying on differences and some commission house demand caused a steadier undertone.

Trade Price-Fixing.

Trade price-fixing as well as some commission house buying became a little more noticeable as the Southern selling tapered off. By the middle of the afternoon prices had rallied to net gains of 8 or 10 points or 14 to 16 points above the morning's lows. Some short covering developed on the advance with contracts scarce, but when this demand had been satisfied and hedging increase toward the close prices eased 9 to 11 points.

A private crop estimate pointed to an outturn of 12,227,000 bales, and to ginnings of 11,075,000 bales prior to December 1.

Liverpool cables essentially failed from the continent, local sources and Egypt, but this was offset by an advance in sterling. Exports today 53,094, making 3,131,760 so far this season. Port receipts 21,101, U. S. Port stocks 4,842,086.

U. S. Steel Will Close Newburg Wire Works

New York, Dec. 1 (A.P.).—The U. S. Steel Corporation announced today that it would close the Newburg works of the American Steel & Wire Co., a subsidiary, at Cleveland.

Productive activity of the Newburg works will be taken to the company's Lorain, Ohio, plant, about 20 miles from Cleveland. The corporation has excess production capacity there. Decision to close the Newburg works was based on the fact that this plant is now obsolete. The Lorain plant is modernized. The move will be made early next summer.

The Washington Post. DECEMBER 2, 1932.

THE ONCE OVER

H. I. PHILLIPS

ANOTHER MORATORIUM CASE!

THE following communication has been received and forwarded to Washington:

Dear Editor: As I will find it very difficult, if not impossible, to meet my obligations falling due on December 25th, I am writing to ask you to advise me in the matter of lightening the burden.

I am not asking cancellation. What I want is a moratorium.

* * * *

The facts are these: Some time between 12 p. m., December 24th, and 9 a. m., December 25th, I am supposed to meet obligations of such magnitude that the very thought of them unnerves me. For many years I have come across gladly and without any great trouble. Last year the strain was almost too much for me, however, and this year, with only three or four weeks to go before the fateful night, I am in a panic.

* * * * *

I just don't see how I can pay. It has been a tough year with me. All my toy designers have been working only two days a week, most of my shops have been closed all summer, all members of my staff have been working under serious pay cuts, and one of my most important departments, the correspondence bureau, has been so undermanned as to be woefully crippled. As a matter of fact, I haven't been able to answer 30 per cent of the children's letters and it is now certain that at least that percentage will never be answered this year.

* * * *

I have had practically no personal income for the past year on account of the world-wide depression, and have been compelled to economize as never before. I am wearing the same red suit I wore in 1929, my toes are through my boots, and I am getting along with one mitten. In addition to all this, all my reindeers except Donder and Blitzen have starved to death, and they are pretty sick.

* * * *

It must be pretty plain to you that I am in no shape to make good in accordance with my former standards. What to do? That is the question. It seems to me that if Mr. Hoover would grant a moratorium of six months it would be a great help. Unless the experts are kidding me, everything will have picked up by then and I will be able to meet my obligations by June or July.

* * * *

I have discussed this informally with Mr. Roosevelt, but he took the position that the responsibility rests with the party now invested with authority. He is willing to discuss my plea with Mr. Hoover, if invited, but he will not commit himself. He takes the position that I will not come under his jurisdiction until December, 1933.

Anyhow, any advice you can give me will be appreciated. I am on the spot as never before.

Yours hopefully, S. CLAUS.

A SWELL JOB FOR SOMEBODY.

There ought to be a swell return this season for somebody with a practical idea for reconditioning last year's Christmas cards.

In that recent divorce of the Radio Corporation from General Electric, it is understood Radio gets custody of the pool, but that G. E. gets the right to see it every six months.

SOMETHING LIKE SCZSKIMCLOANIMAN?

"That bird on All-American team!" sneered Elmer Twitchell. "Why, he hasn't enough syllables in his name to make the second eleven!"

Trotzky is in Denmark lecturing on Bolshevism, which just goes to show that all men like to tell about how they lost their jobs.

The new Radio City Theater of Mr. Roxy is said to be so elaborate that every violinist has his own individual rising platform.

3-Cent Fare Fight Wins Praise of Representative

Corporation Counsel Bride, Chairman Patrick of the Public Utilities Commission, and Peoples Counsel Keech were congratulated yesterday by Chairman Mary Norton of the House District committee "on the vigorous fight both you and your assistants have been making to sustain the will of Congress in connection with the 3-cent fare rate for school children."

Mrs. Norton expressed her active interest in the 3-cent school fare fight in a letter to the three officials dictated by long-distance telephone to her secretary here. She and other members of Congress, she wrote, have been impressed "by the sad plight of many poor children in the District who live at great distances from their respective schools."

Wants Gems

Mrs. Tarkington Demands Police Return Jewels Taken From Thief.

Mrs. Susannah K. Tarkington, wife of Booth Tarkington, the author, yesterday in District Supreme Court took steps necessary to regain possession of two valuable pieces of jewelry in the hands of the Police Department.

Through attorneys, Mrs. Tarkington sued out a writ of replevin. Deputy United States marshals went to Police Headquarters and were given the jewels, valued at $2,150.

Mrs. Tarkington said the police took the gems from Jay LaRue on October 11. A platinum retangular wrist watch, with 44 diamonds and 16 sapphires, and an aquamarine brooch, with 52 diamonds, were the articles recovered. They will be held by United States Marshal E. C. Snyder until Monday noon, a requirement of law, and will then be turned over to Mrs. Tarkington's attorneys.

Detective Sergt. Charles Warfield said that he saw the jewels in the possession of LaRue in a pawnshop. He attempted to trail LaRue, but lost him. LaRue was later arrested. A woman who said she was Cynthia LaRue was with the man.

A large quantity of jewelry, including the Tarkington gems, was found when LaRue was searched. He was sent to Florida to face charges and the woman to Philadelphia.

TENANT BLACKLIST CHARGES ARE AIRED AT RENTAL INQUIRY

Witnesses Who Lost Jobs Relate Lease Woes to Senators.

Charges that apartment dwellers have been blacklisted by some local real estate operators when they attempted to break leases and change residence were filed with the Senate District committee yesterday and supported by testimony of three witnesses.

The charges were preferred by Oscar Brinkman, rent investigator for the committee. Witnesses supporting the charges were Kenneth Ardenger, 829 Quincy street northwest; Miss Ellen Kelly, 736 Twenty-second street northwest, and a Mrs. Lansdale, 1740 K street northwest. Each was subpenaed to testify.

Brinkman further alleged that the executive committee of the Washington Real Estate Board had directed its attorney to "talk informally" with judges of the Municipal Court about stays of eviction against tenants. Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, said prosecution for contempt of court would be warranted if this had been done.

Talk to Judges Urged.

Brinkman said the records of the Real Estate Board's executive committee meeting of September 9 showed the following:

"The President stated that a great many members had informed him it seems to be the practice of two judges in Municipal Court to grant judgments in cases of nonpayment of rent with a stay of execution varying from 3 to 15 days, Judges Cobo and Mattingly being the most lenient.

"The President was instructed to discuss the matter with Roger J. Whiteford, attorney for the board, with a view to having Mr. Whiteford talk informally with the judges of the Municipal Court."

In support of the black list charges, Mr. Ardenger testified he had been forced to move from an apartment when he and his wife had lost their jobs. He said the rental agents when informed of the situation refused to release him from his existing lease, and that agents for the building to which he wished to move would not rent him an apartment until he had obtained a release. Similar testimony was given by Miss Kelly and Mrs. Lansdale.

Housing Expert Introduced.

Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of Public Buildings and Public Parks, introduced John Ihlder, housing consultant for the National Park and Planning Commission, who told of housing studies sponsored by the commission, with a view to relieving the local unemployment situation.

Louis Justement, representing Washington Chapter, American Institute of Architects, discussed housing studies conducted by the institute, and told the committee of a bill the chapter will introduce asking exclusive privileges for the institute to build in certain areas of the cities. In return for the privileges, he said the institute will ask only a 6 per cent return on its investment.

John Nolen, jr., city planner, told the committee it was his opinion that some apartment dwellers could obtain cheaper rentals if they would not insist on living in the Northwest section. He said rents are cheap in the Southwest section.

LeRoy Halbert, director of the emergency relief committee, charged that eviction notices in some cases are issued to frighten tenants into paying their rent.

Christmas Mailing Warning Is Issued

Postoffice Advises Early Sending of Gifts to Avoid Rush.

"Do your Christmas mailing early"—in fact, start this coming week if you would have your gifts received on time.

This was a warning issued yesterday by Postmaster William Mooney. He urged that patrons of the Washington Postoffice begin their Christmas-gift mailing at once and to have the bulk stamped and in the mails not later than next week.

"By the first of next week," the postmaster pointed out, "the annual pre-Christmas strain and overload will be thrown on postal departments throughout the country. We hope to see this week a big mailing week in Washington."

Advertising Men Lunch Today.

"Money for Christmas" will be the theme of the luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club of Washington today at 12:30 o'clock, at the Raleigh Hotel. Elliot H. Thompson, publicity director of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. and chairman of the bankers' association committee on Christmas funds, will be the honor guest speaker of the day.

BOYS FIND BURGLAR BOOTY IN PATUXENT

$75,000 in Notes Taken From J. C. Weedon Co. Are Recovered.

Nonnegotiable notes amounting to about $75,000 were recovered by two boys yesterday from the Patuxent River, where the securities had apparently been thrown by burglars who looted the office of the J. C. Weedon Co. Monday night.

The notes were in two safe deposit boxes whose combination locks had been drilled open. John Binger and Charles Moreland, both of Largo, were crossing the western branch of the river near Largo when they saw something white in the water, which is only a few inches deep. Investigating they found the two boxes in a white canvas sack.

Several watches, stolen from the real estate company at 1727 K street northwest at the same time the papers were taken, also were found in the sack. Officials of the company last night had not had an opportunity to check the papers to make sure that all of them had been recovered.

The boxes, weighing from 150 to 200 pounds each, were taken from the vault in the Weedon Co.'s office after the thieves had entered by a rear window. They were dragged to a rear door, where all trace of them was lost until they were found in the river yesterday. About $200 in cash, also stolen at the time, was not recovered.

Fourteenth Street Parade Is Tonight

Many Civic Groups Have Entered Floats in Yule Celebration.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the Central Business Men's Association, last night predicted that the annual parade of the organization down Fourteenth street tonight would be the most interesting and largest Christmas procession that it has staged.

The march will begin at 7:30 o'clock at Florida avenue and Fourteenth street. It will pass down Fourteenth street to Thomas Circle, where the reviewing stand will be located. Many civic groups, lodges, clubs and business organizations have entered floats in the procession.

Maj. Robert Hudgins will lead the march on horseback. Special lighting arrangements along Fourteenth street have been made by the merchants who are cooperating in sponsoring the parade.

30-Day Sentence Given Driver Who Fled Police

A 30-day stay in jail was ordered imposed on James J. Raum, 2235 Prout street southeast, yesterday when he was convicted of reckless driving in Police Court.

Policeman Benjamin F. Bean, of the Third Precinct, was off duty, he said, when Baum's car struck his. An ensuing chase led over most of Southeast Washington before Raum stopped. He was charged with reckless driving. Raum told Judge Gus A. Schuldt the reason he did not stop was that he did not know he was being followed by a policeman.

Walter Reed Patients to Hold Sale.

Dr. Marvin Advises Them High Type of Ideals Now Prevails.

Miss Marjorie Nelson, of Class of '36, Gives Welcome Talk.

Yesterday was Mothers Day at George Washington University.

The mothers of freshman girls spent the entire day at the university, meeting administrative officers and members of the faculty and gaining first hand acquaintance with classroom work and extra-curricular activities.

They were told by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, and by Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., a member of the board of trustees, at an assembly, that the college generation of today is motivated by high type of idealism.

Dr. Marvin said that his experience in traveling about the country and meeting with college groups convinced him that they are rapidly getting away from the age of carelessness and freedom through which the younger generation passed during the last decade.

Dr. Marvin urged the cooperation of parents in maintaining high social standards, asserting that the university must be the annex of the home and the home an annex of the university. They must work together to create an environment in which our youth may develop themselves into the type of men and women they should be, he said.

Mrs. Evans told the mothers that the more she saw of young people the more convinced she is of their fineness, which, she declared, is often hidden beneath a jaunty smile. "The errors they make which cause criticism usually are but mistakes in social judgment," she said. "They are led by a flaming spirit of adventure which was ours in our youth, but today they are living in a world that has been incredibly speeded up."

Miss Marjorie Nelson, of the class of 1936, welcomed the mothers on behalf of the freshmen. Mrs. Henry M. Milburn, mother of a member of the freshman class, responded on behalf of the mothers. Dr. William Allen Wilbur, provost of the university, opened the assembly with the invocation.

A luncheon, prepared by students of the department of home economics, was served at noon in Corcoran Hall. Dean Henry Grattan Doyle of the junior college, the speaker at the luncheon, explained the university advisory system and other measures designed for the benefit of the student.

A demonstration of the work of the department of physical education for women completed the mothers' day program.

Forced Retirement Held Not Economy

Official in Federation of Workers Predicts Rise in U. S. Expenses.

The compulsory retirement clause in the recently adopted economy act was termed "wholly indefensible" by Ulrey J. Biller, retirement statistician of the National Federation of Federal Employes, at a meeting last night of the Veterans' Administration Branch of Federal Employes' Union No. 2.

Mr. Biller charged that the compulsory retirement provision would result in an additional cost of from $75,000,000 to $90,000,000 in annuities during the next ten years. He also predicted a loss of $7,000,000 in employe contributions to the retirement fund.

"Compulsory retirement," Mr. Biller declared, "may be desirable for reasons other than economy, but as an economy measure it is wholly indefensible."

Various phases of organization work were outlined by John D. Cloud, national organizer, and Henry G. Nolda, secretary-treasurer of the local.

TRAFFIC TOLL

TO DATE.

How are the brakes on your car? Do the headlights focus correctly? Does the windshield wiper function efficiently? Are your tires properly inflated?

If you can answer "O. K." to all the above questions, then, Mr. Motorist, you are helping to make the streets of Washington accident proof and conforming with regulations requiring such status of equipment.

Though there were 416 less accidents in the eleven-month period ended November than the corresponding period of 1931, injuries received in those accidents were 232 more than in the corresponding period. Deaths were 44 more. The figures are:

Deaths	70	114
Accidents	7,617	7,199

HEATING PLANT JOB GOES TO PITTSBURGH

Rust Engineering Company Is Awarded Contract Over Washington Bidders.

The Rust Engineering Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., underbid two Washington firms for the construction of the new central heating plant of the Triangle building project, the Treasury Department announced yesterday. Its bid was $1,489,900.

Bids of $1,573,000 and $1,574,800 were submitted by the George A. Fuller Co. and the John W. Cowper Co., respectively, both of Washington. Award of the contract will be made in a few days after examination of the bids has been completed.

The Fuller company yesterday was awarded the contract for construction of the new Archives Building at a figure of $5,284,000. This company has 730 calendar days in which to complete the work.

In awarding this contract the Treasury Department decided to use limestone instead of granite for its construction. A saving of more than $1,000,000 was effected in the choice of building stone, as the low granite bid, offered by the Fleisher Engineering & Construction Co., was $6,477,000.

District Prisoner to Die In Electric Chair Today

Charles Morris, colored, convicted slayer, will be electrocuted in the District Jail today, some time after 10 o'clock this morning. His last legal move to secure a commutation of the death sentence was exhausted Monday when presidential clemency was denied him.

Morris was shown to have shot and killed a colored woman on the banks of the Cheaspeake & Ohio Canal two years ago. He claimed he shot her in self-defense, but a jury in the District Supreme Court refused to believe his story.

Government Unit Adds $7,337 to Chest Fund

Additional gifts amounting to $7,337.40 were received by the Community Chest yesterday from the governmental unit. These gifts, representing twelve departments, brought the governmental total to date to $509,392.77, a little more than 52 per cent of this unit's quota.

The Chest total to date is $1,863,081.50, although there are a number of gifts that have been brought in and which have not yet been audited.

Hinton Will Discuss Aviation.

Aviation as a career for young men will be discussed by Walter Hinton, pioneer transatlantic flier, in a free public lecture tonight at 8 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A., 1736 G street northwest.

D. C. GOVERNMENT'S REORGANIZATION IS PLEA OF COL. GRANT

Concentration of Authority Is Urged as One Way to Economize.

Reorganization of the District government is being urged on the Senate economy committee as an untouched field for Federal savings, it was disclosed yesterday.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, Director of Public Buildings and Public Parks, suggested the change in a recent economy report to the committee.

He wrote:

"In spite of the fact that the city government here is honest, frugal and well administered as compared with most other American cities, reorganization of the District of Columbia government, particularly by concentrating more executive authority and responsibility in one person, promises substantial economies.

Not Always in Accord.

"However, the measures by which this can be done, without too violently upsetting the work of the past, would require a longer discussion than seems appropriate here."

Col. Grant and the District Commissioners have not always been in agreement on matters of local administration touching the jurisdiction of both offices.

Friction Last Session.

Some slight friction arose between the two last sessions, when Col. Grant sought authority from Congress to approve or reject local street closings ordered by the District Commissioners. The Grant bill was amended, however, to the satisfaction of all parties. It was specified that the Commissioners submit their plan for closing streets to the National Park and Planning Commission, but need not necessarily follow its recommendations. The bill passed the Senate and was favorably reported by the House District committee.

At that time Corporation Counsel W. W. Bride suggested that there was a "vast no man's land" of local laws on which jurisdiction, whether by the District Commissioners or the National Park and Planning Commission, was not clearly defined.

Kronick Attempts Dicker With Police

Will Aid in Tracing Loot If Wife Is Absolved, He Tells Authorities.

If the New York authorities are lenient with Kenneth M. Kronick (alias Hundred) and the Washington police will absolve his second wife of any complicity in the 75 robberies he is suspected of having committed here, the confessed jimmy thief will aid in the tracing of the loot he obtained by his housebreakings.

This was announced yesterday in New York by Kronick, who was arrested there Tuesday after his wife had inadvertently led detectives to her husband. Both Kronick and his wife, and the former Frances Hodges, have insisted that she is innocent of any wrongdoing.

Kronick, who bigamously married his second wife, is scheduled for a hearing today on a concealed weapon charge. When arrested he attempted to draw a gun, but was subdued. If this charge is nolle-prossed, he will be given a removal hearing Tuesday.

Child Hurt by Mother's Auto Is Much Improved

Little Louise Brown, 9-year-old daughter of Mrs. Nell Brown, of 4637 Brewer place northwest, who was seriously injured Wednesday night, when run over by her mother's automobile, was reported as "much improved" at Georgetown Hospital last night.

The child toppled from the front seat of a machine driven by Mrs. Brown, and her body was crushed beneath the wheels. A loosely fastened door of the car, was held responsible for the girl's fall.

Costly Fuel

Children's Hospital to Burn Coal Lost by Slemp in Election Bet.

Children's Hospital will burn expensive fuel for the next few days.

This was insured yesterday when the Griffith-Consumers Coal Co. delivered to that institution the ton of coal flown here by airplane in payment of a bet lost by Bascom Slemp to John F. Costello.

With the natural pride of the victor over the vanquished, Mr. Costello has kept his coal on display since its arrival here shortly after election and having satisfied that pride he yesterday turned it over to Children's Hospital in which he has always been deeply interested.

Miss Mattie Gibson and several of the nurses were present to receive the coal which was delivered in the original white bags in which it was flown here from Mr. Slemp's mine.

TRANSFER PRIVILEGE EXTENSION ORDERED

P. U. C. Also Rules Mirrors Must Be Installed in Intercity Buses.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered the Washington Railway & Electric Co. to issue transfers on transfers so long as the ride would be continuous. The Capitol Traction Co. is following such a policy, it was explained, but the other street railway has been refusing to issue such transfers.

The commission also granted permission to the Washington Rapid Transit Co. to extend its weekly ticket system another eleven weeks or form December 10 to February 25. At the same time the bus company was allowed to increase the charge for the nonrush-period ticket book from 50 to 60 cents a week. The bus line submitted figures showing that the average cost per passenger using the latter ticket book is only 3½ cents a ride.

A request from the Taxicab Drivers Union that the commission set up eleven temporary hack stands, accommodating 44 cabs, during the Christmas shopping season rush, was denied.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. was permitted to postpone for another year, or until January 1, 1933, the minimum charge of $30 on the teletype systems.

All intracity buses were ordered to be equipped with rear view mirrors both inside and outside.

The oft-repeated request of the Brightwood Citizens Association that the street railway poles in the center of Kennedy street be removed to the side was denied.

Two Hurt in Collision of Cars.

Miss Mary Chieff, 540 Ninth street northwest, and Miss Elsie Pitton, 5226 Eighth street northwest, suffered cuts and bruises last night when the cars of Francis Mercardo, of New York City, and James W. Powell, 5132 Eighth street northwest, collided at Arkansas avenue and Upshur street northwest. They were riding with Mercardo.

P. U. C. PLANS JOINT VALUATION HEARING IN GAS LIGHT CASE

District and Maryland to Conduct Financial Survey Together.

For the first time in the District's history the Public Utilities Commission will hold a joint hearing with a nearby State commission to determine the valuation of properties of a Washington public utility and its subsidiaries.

The commission yesterday granted a request from Harold E. West, chairman of the Maryland Public Service Commission, that such a hearing be held in the pending gas case. He explained that his agency has been making a valuation of the gas company properties in Montgomery County and that this work will be completed about the same time the District finishes its preliminary valuation of the Washington Gas Light Co. properties.

While the District commission was uncertain as to the extent of the Maryland valuation, it is believed that it is limited to Montgomery County and the properties of the Washington Gas Light Co. of Montgomery County and the Georgetown Gas Light Co. of Montgomery County. Gas in Prince Georges County is furnished by the Washington & Suburban Gas Co., which while linked with the same holding companies as the Washington company is not a subsidiary of it.

Objection by Keech.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech voiced an objection to the proposed joint hearing at the commission meeting yesterday on the ground that it would serve only as a handicap to the District's case and might result in some complications in the matter of assigning property between the Washington concern and its subsidiaries.

The hearing will be held early in February although the valuation work is expected to be completed by December 31. A month's notice is necessary, however, in setting the date for the hearing.

As the present reduction in gas bills of 8½ per cent, in effect since August 1, will expire on January 31, the commission will issue a similar order continuing the reduction until a regular rate reduction is made on the basis of the new valuation.

Gas Case Gets Precedence.

Although the street railway valuation case is also nearing completion after more than two years of investigation, the gas case will be given precedence, according to Riley E. Elgen, vice chairman of the commission.

The 8½ per cent cut on all gas bills is also in effect in Montgomery County although the regular rate is higher than in Washington, and it is presumed that this likewise will be continued until new rates are established.

Mr. West will be in Washington next Thursday to confer with the District commission regarding the hearing.
